INTRODUCTION

THE Saundarya-laharī, “ the Flood of Beauty ”, eminently shares the characteristics of (i) a Poem displaying the finest touches of poetical fancy, (ii) a Stotra, Hymn in praise of the Goddess Tri-pura-sundarī, (iii) a series of Mantra-s, mystic formulæ, to be used by the Upāsaka along with the corresponding Yantra-s, Diagrams, wherein the Devī is to be conceived as abiding, and (iv) an exposition of the Āgama-s and Tantra-s, bearing on the worship of the Supreme Being in Its aspect of the S’akti, Creative Energy, known as the S’rī-vidyā, embodying the underlying principles of Vaidika-dharma and as such having the sanction of the Veda-s. In its first forty-one stanzas it encompasses the Ānanda-laharī, “ the Flood of the Blissfully Sublime ”. As the very names and the design of the two parts indicate, it points, on the one hand, to the way of approach to the Paramātman, attainable only through true spiritual devotion and knowledge of the real nature of the Paramātmā, supplemented by the successful accomplishment of the highest Yoga of Nir-vikalpa-samādhi ; on the other hand, it leads in effect to the merging of the Jīvātman of the Upāsaka into the non-differentiated Brahman, so exquisitely expounded in the Upaniṣad-s and other authoritative works dealing with the Monistic Ideal of the Vedānta, through the worship of the qualified Brahman, so well portrayed in Stotra-s, Āgama-s, Tantra-s, Purāṇa-s and the Karma-kāṇḍa, thus typifying Nir-guṇopāsanā through Sa-guṇopāsanā in essence.

A unique feature of the Sanātana-dharma of the ancient Ṛṣi-s of this Puṇya-bhūmi of ours, which has enabled this time-hallowed system of theirs to endure through the ages, consists in the fact that it is elastic and comprehends systems adapted to the capacity, idiosyncrasy and stage of development attained by the various classes of persons owing allegiance to it, from individuals on the highest to the lowest rungs of the ladder of spiritual Evolution. The highest forms of worship envisaged by the Vedic Seers of yore stand far above the ken of the vast majority, for whose delectation suitable forms of worship of Viṣṇu, Śiva, the Śakti and other Vedic deities have been elaborated by the large number of Āgama-s, Tantra-s, Purāṇa-s, Itihāsa-s, etc., all within the ambit of the Vedic ideal, and these have captured the imagination of these classes and continue to hold sway over their minds even to the present day.

One of such forms of worship is the Śrī-vidyā, the worship of the Supreme Being in Its feminine aspect of the Śakti, Creative Energy, which embraces two forms: (i) the Internal, meant for the more advanced, assuming the character of worship of the Supreme Being in the aspect of Śiva conjoint with the Śakti, at the various centres of energy of the human body, passing through various stages on to the highest, eschewing all rituals and ceremonies; and (ii) the External, intended for the less evolved, assuming the form of worshipping Yantra-s inscribed on the Bhūrja leaf, gold and other metallic plates, coloured linen or slabs, to the accompaniment of the repetition of particular Mantra-s made up of the Mātṛkā-s, with appropriate gestures, postures, facing of particular cardinal points, offerings of Dhūpa, Dīpa, Naivedya, etc., all with a view to acquiring special psychic powers, gratification of specific desires, etc., of the Upāsaka. The former, known as the Samaya-mārga, is based on the Saṃhitā-s of the S'ubhāgama-pañcaka, the works of five great Seers, and does not, in any way, run counter to Vedic principles. The latter, known as the Kaula-mārga and dealt with in the sixty-four Tantra-s, although primarily intended for the worship of the Devī, has, in course of time, afforded scope for the inclusion of vulgar practices (Vāmācāra) smacking of Kāpālika and Kṣapaṇaka usages, appealing to the venal side of human nature and exercising a demoralizing influence on the votaries to an extent not countenanced by the Veda-s. These unwholesome features of the S'ākta cult began to weigh on the minds of high-souled reformers of the type of S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda, who soon opened a crusade against such practices by expounding the sublime truths of the Samaya-mārga in their writings and preachings, with a view to uphold the beautiful methods of the Samaya doctrine and supplant the ugly features of the Kaula-mārga. Hence this work is appropriately called the Saundarya-laharī, the Flood of Beauty, washing out in its torrent the filth accumulated in the Kaula-mārga and restoring the purity of the S'rī-vidyā in relation to its external forms and ceremonies. In this laudable attempt he seems to have been ably served, in a later generation, by Lakṣmī-dhara and Bhāskara-rāya, two celebrated scholars and stalwart mystics acquainted with the inner working of the worship of the S'rī-vidyā, in their commentaries on several works relating to it. Lakṣmī-dhara's zeal for the preservation of the Samaya-mārga in all its purity and for the reform of the Kaula-mārga is so great that he even steps beyond the province of a mere commentator and differs from the author of the original work in matters of detail, where he thinks his own personal experience of the recondite practices warrants him to do so.

S'rī S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda is accredited as the author of the Saundarya-laharī¹ by ¹ Vallabha-deva, who is assigned to the fifteenth century A.D., in his Su-bhāṣitāvalī, quotes the twenty-seventh stanza of this work, ascribing its authorship to S'rī S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda.

Lakṣmī-dhara, Bhāskara-rāya, Kaivalyās'rama, Kameśvara-sūri, Acyutānanda and a host of other commentators of the work. The author of the gloss, Sudhā-vidyotini, on this work, however, ascribes it to his own father, Pravara-sena, the son of Dramiḍa, a king of the Dramiḍa country, and says that on the strength of the information directly obtained from his father he wrote the said gloss. There are others who say that Ś'iva himself is the author of the Stotra, and yet others who maintain that it had its origin in the teeth of Lalitā, the Prime Ś'akti.¹ Those who ascribe it to Śaṃkara-bhagavat-pāda also aver that the Draviḍa-siś'u, referred to in stanza 75 of the work, is S'aṃkara himself, one of them, Kaivalyāśrama, even going to the extent of making a remark, in his gloss on one of the stanzas, that it is not found in the manuscripts of the Malaiyālam country, seeking thereby to fix the Malaiyālam country as the place of origin of the work and indirectly hinting that S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda was a native of Malabar. The fact that there are as many as thirty-five glosses of this work known to be extant in various parts of India, of which only one attributes the authorship to a person other than S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda, at least affords us greater proof of the genuineness of S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda's authorship of this Stotra, than of several other Stotra-s ascribed to him. Even if the reference to the Draviḍa-s'is'u in the work be taken to point to some other person, whether it be Pravara-sena, as is claimed by one of the commentaries, of Śrī Jñāna-saṃbandha, as is claimed by some chronologists, one noteworthy fact results out of this reference, viz., that the Draviḍa-s'is'u must either have been a contemporary of the author of this work or one belonging to a prior period. Till the identity and other antecedents of Pravara-sena, king of the Draviḍa country, are fairly well established and his chronology fixed with a fair amount of accuracy, we are not warranted in drawing any inference therefrom relating to the genuineness of the claim put forward in his favour. As for S'rī Jñāna-saṁbandha, who is said to have flourished about 1,200 years ago, if the Draviḍa-s'is'u under reference is to be taken to point to him, we have to infer that S'aṁkara-bhagavat-pāda, to whom almost universally this work is attributed, must have flourished in the eighth century A. D., an inference which is supported by the view of European scholars that S'rī S'aṁkarācārya, the author of the S'ārīraka-mīmāṃsā-bhāṣya, flourished between A. D. 788 and 820. If the opinion held by Indian scholars that Ādi S'aṁkara flourished in the sixth century B. C. should be adhered to and this work attributed to him, then the internal evidence afforded by the Draviḍa-s'is'u will be perfectly useless, unless some other Draviḍa-s'is'u answering to the description is dragged out of oblivion and presented to us as the one referred to by S'aṁkara-bhagavat-pāda. We are loath to acquiesce in the view that S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda sought to refer to himself as the Draviḍa-s'is'u indicated in such vainglorious terms in the poem. We are therefore of opinion that the Draviḍa-s'is'u referred to is S'rī Jñāna-saṃbandha and that this Stotra is the genuine work of S'rī-S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda, who lived in the eighth century A.D.

In editing the text of the work, we have mainly followed the work published by the Government of Mysore as No. 11 of the BIBLIOTHECA SANSKRITA of the Government Oriental Library Series, after adopting suitable readings wherever we thought it necessary. The various readings gleaned from the commentaries of Lakṣmī-dhara, Kaivalyās'rama, Kāmes'vara-sūri and Arthur Avalon's edition of the Ānanda-laharī have been given as foot-notes under the several stanzas, and we hope that they will afford an opportunity to the reader to appreciate the various shades of meaning sought to be read into the text. In the English rendering and the commentary of the stanzas we have largely drawn from the mine of information available in the commentaries mentioned above, the Malaiyālam commentary of Brahma-srī Kaṇṭiyūr Mahādeva S'āstrin and the editions of the Ānanda-laharī with English rendering, notes and comments by Arthur Avalon and R. Ananta-kṛṣṇa S'āstrin. We may add in this connection that the MS. copy of the commentary, Aruṇāmodinī of Kāmes'vara-sūri, which has not so far been published and which contains a fund of rare material for the elucidation of the work, was made available to us by the courtesy of our friend Mr. T. Viśva-nātha Rao.

We have added in the form of an appendix the Prayoga relating to each stanza, gleaned from several sources for the benefit of Upāsaka-readers and a preliminary note at the end of the first stanza as to the detailed procedure to be adopted for worship, common to all the stanzas. The Yantra-s relating to each stanza will also be found inserted in their proper places.

In this connection we would strongly recommend a close study of the 'Varivasyā-rahasya' by S'rī Bhāskara-rāya 'The Serpent-power' by Arthur Avalon, and 'The Cakra-s' by the Rt. Rev. C. W. Leadbeater to advanced students of the S'rī-vidyā, who will find therein plenty of interesting additional material relating to the Cakra-s and how far the practitioner could rely on them in the course of his practice, as also the pitfalls to be avoided by him. We have however to sound a note of caution here. The very essence of the S'rī-vidyā consists in its being availed of by its votaries to serve lofty and altruistic purposes. Hence care should be always taken to see that it is not dethroned from its high pedestal, to serve ignoble and selfish ends.

We have, in conclusion, to acknowledge our deep indebtedness to M. R. Ry. R. Kṛṣṇa-svāmi S'āstrin, B. A., the celebrated scholar, for the various suggestions and explanations of recondite portions so kindly offered by him in the course of our work.

SAUNDARYA-LAHARI

THE votaries of the S'akti, the Kuṇḍalinī, may be roughly divided into two classes: the Samayin-s or those who believe in the sameness of the S'akti and S'iva, and the Kaula-s or those who worship the Kaulinī, the sleeping Kuṇḍalinī, i.e., the S'akti, which resides in the Mūlā-dhāra, which is known as the Kula-plexus. The former believe in the rousing of the above Kuṇḍalinī, the grossest form of Cit, and its being worked up in successive stages, by Upāsanā, Tapas and Mantra-japa, through the six Cakra-s, which are the centres of Energy, on to the thousand-petalled lotus, wherein abide the Sat and the Cit, and where the unification of the Jivātman with the Paramātman is to be effected. This form of worship is therefore exclusively internal. The Kaula-s, on the other hand, worship the Kuṇḍalinī, even without rousing her from sleep and are satisfied with the attainment and enjoyment of purely temporal objects, believing, at the same time, that, with the rousing of the Kuṇḍalinī, they attain Liberation. This form of worship is therefore mainly external. Mention may also be made, here, of some worshippers of the Śakti, who, in addition to attaching due importance to the external forms of worship of the Kaula-s, try to rise higher, by making Upāsana with Yantra-s, made of gold and other metals, awake the Kuṇḍalinī and even work her up as far as the An-āhata in the heart. Their worship may be characterized as partaking of both the external and internal forms. Śaṅkara-bhagavat-pāda, the foremost exponent of the Samayācāra, extols Samayā, the Sādākhya, the sixteenth digit of the Moon, in all her aspects, in the following hundred and three stanzas.

As, without a thorough grasp of the details of the formation of the Śrī-cakra, the full significance of the first forty-one stanzas, which baffle even advanced students of Mantra-lore, cannot be adequately understood, a short description of the Śrī-cakra would be a fitting prelude to the elucidation attempted in the following pages.

The following construction is given by Kaivalyās'rama, a commentator of this work, for the building of the Śrī-cakra: Describe a circle, with an imaginary vertical line of a suitable length as its diameter. Divide the diameter into forty-eight equal parts and mark off the sixth, twelfth, seventeenth, twentieth, twenty-third, twenty-seventh, thirtieth, thirty-sixth and forty-second divisions from the top. Draw nine chords, at right angles to the diameter, through the nine points marked off, and number them accordingly. Rub off 1/16th part of No. 1, 5/48ths of No. 2, 1/3rd of No. 4, 3/8ths of No. 5, 1/3rd of No. 6, 1/12th of No. 8, and 1/16th of No. 9, at both ends of each.¹ Draw triangles with lines, Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 8 and 9 as bases and the middle points of Nos. 6, 9, 8, 7, 2, 1 and 3 respectively as their apexes. Draw also the two triangles with Nos. 3 and 7 as their bases and the lower and the upper extremities of the diameter as apexes respectively. Thus we get forty-three triangles pointing outwards, composed of one in the middle, eight triangles around it, two sets of ten triangles around the eight triangles, one set about the other, and fourteen triangles around them. Then, by marking off eight points in the circumference equidistant from one another, commencing from the upper extremity of the diameter and constructing one petal over each of them, is formed the eight-petalled lotus. Then, circumscribe a circle touching the outer extremity of the petals. Divide the circumference of the circle so described into sixteen equal divisions and draw symmetrically sixteen petals over them, as before. Then, circumscribe a circle round the sixteen-petalled lotus, as before, and enclose the second circle so described in two concentric circles at equal distances from each other. Construct three squares about the outermost circle, with sides equidistant from each other, the innermost square not to touch the outermost circle. Marking off four doorways on the four sides, each equidistant from either extremities, rub off the interspaces. The figure thus formed is the Srī-cakra. The centre of the circle is known as the Bindu. The five triangles with their apexes pointing downwards are indicative of the S'akti and the four with their apexes pointing upwards are of S'iva, according to the Vāmakes'vara-tantra, the recognized authority on Srī-Vidyā. (Vide Frontispiece.)

Lakṣmī-dhara, a reputed commentator of this work, holds that, in the Srī-cakra, the five triangles pointing upwards are of the S'akti and the four pointing downwards are of S'iva and speaks of the construction of the Cakra, as consisting of two different processes, the Samhāra-krama, from without inwards, and the Sṛṣṭi-krama from within outwards. The Srī-cakra of the Samhāra-krama of Lakṣmī-dhara can be obtained by turning the Srī-cakra recognized by the Vāmakes'vara-tantra upside down. This is given as the diagram relating to the twenty-second stanza. The Srī-cakra of the Sṛṣṭi-krama is given as the diagram relating to the thirty-first stanza.

The mode of constructing the Srī-cakra, in the Sṛṣṭi-krama, of the Samayin-s, according to him, is as follows : Draw an isosceles triangle with its apex pointing upwards and its base parallel to the bottom line of the sheet.

Place the Bindu, a dot, a little above the base, in an imaginary vertical line bisecting the base. A little above the Bindu, draw a straight line parallel to the base, intersecting the sides of the original triangle. Draw an isosceles triangle with apex pointing upwards over this line. Draw a straight line through the apex of the first triangle, parallel to its base and construct an isosceles triangle on it, with apex pointing downwards, so that its sides may pass through the points of intersection of the base of the second triangle with the sides of the first triangle. These two points, where three straight lines intersect each other, are technically styled Marman-s, to distinguish them from the points of intersection of two straight lines, which are known as ' Samdhi-s. Thus, then, are formed the eight corner-triangles pointing outwards, which together are known as the Aṣṭa-kona-cakra. By producing the topmost and the bottom-most of the three horizontal lines both-ways and constructing two isosceles triangles, one of them with apex down and the other with apex up, so that the sides of the former may pass through the extremities of the bases of the two triangles pointing upwards and the sides of the latter triangle may pass through the extremities of the base of the original triangle pointing downwards. By producing the sides downwards, of the inner triangle with apex up and drawing a straight line parallel to the base, through the apex of the triangle pointing downwards, a new triangle is formed. Similarly, by producing the sides upwards, of the triangle with apex down and drawing a straight line parallel to the base, through the apex of the first outer triangle with apex up, another triangle is formed. At this stage are obtained ten corner-triangles pointing outwards, which together form what is known as the Antar-dasāra, the inner ten-spoked Cakra. Similarly, by producing the horizontal bases, drawing the arms of triangles at corner-points, so as to form Marman-s and drawing straight lines parallel to the bases, through the apexes of triangles pointing up and down, the ten corner-triangles pointing outwards and known as the Bahir-dasāra or the outer ten-spoked Cakra, is formed. Again, by producing both-ways the bases at the top and the bottom of the Antar-dasāra and constructing isosceles triangles with apex down and apex up; and again by producing the sides of triangles whereby Marman-s could be formed and drawing straight lines parallel to the bases, passing through the apexes of the freshly constructed triangles, the fourteen corner-triangles pointing outwards known as the Catur-dasāra, the fourteen-spoked Cakra, will be obtained. Thus, we get, in all, forty-three corner-triangles, including the inmost one, twenty-four Saṃdhi-s and eighteen Marman-s. It may, however, be noted here, that Lakṣmī-dhara commits an error in giving the number of Marman-s as twenty-four and, quoting the Candra-jñāna-vidyā in this connection, seeks to reconcile the figure twenty-eight given therein, as of the Marman-s, by pointing out that the eight-petalled lotus, the sixteen-petalled lotus, the three outermost circles and the three quadrangles may be treated as four Marman-s, which, together with his twenty-four, would go to make up the twenty-eight Marman-s of the Candra-jñāna-vidyā. This is apparently a laboured explanation, which, in trying to hide one fault, only results in making it two. A more ingenious attempt at reconciliation would have been, for him, to treat the six points of contact of the Catur-das'āra with the inmost circle also as Marman-s. According to the Samayin-s, the four Cakra-s constituted by the Bindu (of the form of the Srī-cakra, viz., circular), the eight-petalled lotus, the sixteen-petalled lotus and the quadrangular Bhū-gr̥ha, are of Śiva, which are inter-related with the Tri-koṇa, the Aṣṭa-koṇa, the dyad of Das'a-koṇa's and the Catur-das'a-koṇa, of the Śakti' respectively, the Bindu of the quadrilateral standing apart from these. On the other hand, another, set of Samayin-s hold that the eight-petalled lotus, the sixteen petalled lotus, the Mekhalā-traya (the triad of concentric circles), and the Bhū-gr̥ha (the three quadrilaterals) are the Śiva-cakra-s, and the Tri-koṇa, the Aṣṭa-koṇa, the dyad of Das'a-koṇa-s, and the Catur-das'a-koṇa are the five Śakti-cakra-s, and aver that the Bindu representing the Śiva-cakra-s, when placed in the middle of the Śakti-cakra-s, would indicate the pervasive character of the Śiva-cakra-s in the Śakti-cakra-s. It has, however, to be noted that the Vāmakes'vara-tantra, while recognizing the Bindu as a Cakra, does not do so in relation to the Mekhalā-traya, as will be seen from the enumeration of the Cakra-s according to it, which is as follows: "The Bindu in the middle, the triangle thereafter, the eight-spoked one thence, the two ten-spoked ones thereabout, the fourteen-spoked one about them, the eight-petalled lotus outside it, the sixteen-petalled lotus thereabout and last of all, the Bhū-pura, are named respectively the Sarvānanda-maya first, the Sarva-siddhi-prada next, the Sarva-roga-hara thereafter, the Sarva-rakṣā-kara similarly, the Sarvārtha-sādhaka-cakra, the Sarva-saubhāgya-dāyaka, the Sarva-saṃkṣobhana the next one, the Sarvāsā-paripūraka, and lastly the Trailokya-mohana—thus the nine with the nine names.”

Goddess!) who art worthy of being adored even by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others?

In keeping with the time-hallowed tradition among great writers of Dars'ana literature, to forestall, in essence, the content of the entire work at the very beginning, the first stanza of this work may be said to contain the quintessence of the S'rī-vidyā, the worship of the Devī. Though Liberation is the goal aimed at by all votaries of the S'rī-vidyā, still, in view of the various ways of approach, due to differences in temperament, idiosyncrasy, as well as their intellectual and spiritual advancement, there is room for the said goal being looked upon from various angles of vision. Kāmes'vara-sūri, the talented commentator of this work, has, in his elaborate commentary of the first stanza, dealt with fourteen different aspects of Ś'iva and the Ś'akti, interpreting the stanza from the following points of view: (1) Vedānta, (2) Sāṃkhya, (3) The Chief Deity of S'rī-vidyā, (4) Significant Words, (5) Their Significance, (6) Genesis of Sounds, (7) The Yantra, (8) The Praṇava, (9) The Mātrkā, the Saṃskṛt Alphabet, (10) Kādi-vidyā, (11) Hādi-vidyā, (12) The Pañcākṣari, (13) The Guru, the Initiator, and (14) Candra-kalā. In addition to the plain English rendering of the first stanza given above, the fourteen different aspects of Kāmes'vara-sūri are also set forth in the form of fourteen different renderings hereunder:

1. Only when in conjunction with the Ś'akti, (the Māyā with the two-fold functions of Āvaraṇa—veiling the real, and Vikṣepa—showing the unreal, not independently however of the Brahman, which is S'iva) would S'iva (the auspicious, undefiled Bliss, i.e., the Brahman, which is the Supreme Existence, Consciousness and Bliss, and becomes Īśvara when amalgamated with the Māyā) acquire the power to create, (sustain and destroy the elements, Ether, etc., and the variants evolved out of them, as also to become one with them); otherwise the Deva (who indulges in the pastimes of creation, etc.,) becomes incapable even of stirring, (not to speak of engaging in the direction of such pastimes). While so, how dares one, who has not (purified his mind, by the accumulation of) virtuous deeds (through many a previous incarnation, has not studied intensively the Upaniṣadic lore and attained Self-realization, through the grace of his Guru and thereby been enabled to comprehend Thy real nature, by the removal of the cobwebs of illusion, which ensnare even the great), either to salute (by way of bidding adieu to Thee) or to extol (with a view to being spared Thy attentions) Thee, (that hast endowed even Īśvara with such powers and that art proficient in rendering what is impossible, possible), (O Māyā!) that art worthy of being served even by Hari (Viṣṇu, the sustainer), Hara (Rudra, the destroyer), Viriṇca (Brahman, the creator) and others (of that type, subject to Avidyā)?

2. Only when in conjunction with the S'akti (Prakṛti, the blind creative Energy, endowed with the three properties: Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—Rhythm, Mobility and Inertia) would S'iva (the lame Puruṣa, called Īśvara, characterized by indifference and not capable of acting independently (acquire the reputation of being the creator and enjoyer of the world. Should it be otherwise, the Deva (Īśvara) becomes totally incapable even of stirring, (much more so, of any action he is reputed to be the author of, as it is from the Prakṛti, in the presence of the Puruṣa, that the Mahat, Ahaṁ-kāra, Tan-mātra-s, etc., in their order, have had their origin). While it is so, how dares one who has not acquired Thy Sattva-guṇa (and hence, the proper knowledge derived from a study of Kapila's system, with the help of a Guru) to salute or to sing the praise (in some such manner as, "What shall I say of Thee, O crest-jewel of chaste women! that hast established Thy greatness, without in any way affecting Thy husband's, Thyself blind and He indifferent"), of Thee (O Goddess!) that art worthy of being served, even by Hari, Hara and Viriṇca, (each one of them, by partaking of the Sattva, Tamas and Rajas respectively of Thy Guṇa-s, in their work of sustenance, destruction and creation) and such others?

3. Only when frolicking with the Śakti (His consort, Haimavati, seated on His lap) would Ś'iva (possessed of infinite auspicious qualities, from whom Bhava—the creator, Mr̥ḍa—the sustainer, and Hara—the destroyer, take their origin, who has His seat on Mount Kailāsa and in the inmost core of the Śrī-cakra) be capable of procreating (as His progeny, the entire universe, nourishing it and becoming its overlord); otherwise, the Deva (though self-effulgent) becomes powerless even of stirring; (much less would there be scope for Him to be credited with achievements, such as the burning of the three Pura-s, swallowing the virulent Hālā-hala and the like). While so, how dares one, (who cannot lay any claim to having worshipped at Thy lotus-feet during previous lives,) either to make obeisance (by body, word of mouth and mind) before, or to glorify Thee (O Goddess!) that art served by Hari, Hara, Viriñca (and Īśvara, as the four legs of Thy couch, by Sadā-sīva as Thy mattress, Mabendra as Thy spittoon and so on) ?

4. Only when in conjunction with (what is implied by the word) 'S'akti', viz., the letter 'E', the Guṇated combination of 'A' and 'I' in the inverse order, i.e., 'I' and 'A'), does the word 'S'īva' acquire a form denoting a deity for the welfare of all the world ; if not so, this word forfeits its luminosity and is turned into a mere sibilant and dento-labial stump, unpronounceable and meaningless. While so, how dares one, who has acquired no merit, either to salute or to praise Thee, (i.e., the vital letter 'E') that art muttered in prayer with the word 'S'īva', by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others ?

5. Only by the conjunction of the S'akti (the appropriate group of words in their proper sequence) would S'īva (the aggregate of their significances) acquire the quality of appealing to the hearts of wise men ; otherwise the Deva (the mere thought, without the expression) will not serve his purpose in everyday life. While so, how dares one, who has acquired no merit, either to salute or to praise Thee, (that art inseparably yoked with thought-forms), O Goddess ! that art worthy of being adored even by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others (for that very reason) ?

6. Only in conjunction with the S'akti, (the Parā-s'akti, the essential basic principle of the S'abda-brahman, who, though one, is spoken of with different names by persons of different persuasions, e.g., as the S'akti by S'ākta-s, as the Cit by S'aiva-s, as the Kuṇḍalinī by Yogin-s, as the Prakṛti by Sāṃkhya-s, as the Brahman by Vedāntin-s, as the Buddhi by Bauddha-s, as the Mahā-sattā by Jāti-vādin-s and as the absolute Dravya by Dravya-vādin-s, and who has assumed diverse forms due to the conditions brought about by the Māyā-s'akti dependent on her) would S'iva, (the S'abda-prapañca) acquire the power to manifest itself (in the Paś'yaṇtī, Madhyamā and Vaikhari stages; and while in the Madhyamā stage, to attain the form of S'abda and Artha and the interrelation between the two). Otherwise, (without the Parā-s'akti) the Deva, the S'abda-brahman, could not be pronounced with the help of the palate and other vocal organs and thus not attain the Vaikhari stage. While so, how dares one, who has acquired no merit, either to salute or to praise Thee (that art the prime cause of the manifestation of the qualified Brahman and the unfolding of the phenomenal world), O Goddess! that art worthy of being adored even by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and other gods, (who have, at their command, the four stages of Parā, Paś'yaṇtī, Madhyamā and Vaikhari)?

7. Only if S'iva (the set of four triangles of the nine triangles of the S'rī-cakra-yantra) comes to be placed with the S'akti (the set of five remaining triangles of the same Cakra) or if S'iva (viz., the Bindu, the point) gets inseparably connected with the S'akti (viz., the Tri-koṇa, the triangle) (i.e., on the bodies of the two thus coming together) would there be scope for the formation of the eight, the two sets of ten and the fourteen koṇas, triangles pointing outwards, along with the eight-petalled and the sixteen-petalled lotuses and the two triads of circles and quadrangles, as also for the creation, sustenance and destruction of the world. If neither of these is the case, the Deva (the aforesaid Śiva) would be incapable of affording scope for the formation of the different parts of the Cakra detailed above, or for its division into the creative, sustaining and destructive aspects, or for the three Prastāra-s into Ku, Śa and La, signifying the Earth, the golden Meru and Mount Kailāsa. While so, how dares one, who has acquired no merit, either to salute or to praise Thee, with an adequate knowledge of the Tantra-s, O venerable One! that art served by Hari—the Sun, Hara—the Fire, Viriñca—the Moon, (Vaśinī, etc., Vāmā, etc., and other Śakti-s, as well as the fifty-one letters of eight groups of the Alphabet, seated in their respective seats as prescribed, in the Cakra) ?

8. Only when brought into union with the Śakti, (‘A’) with ‘’), would Śiva (the dyad of ‘U’ and ‘M’) acquire the power of assuming the form of Praṇava, the embodied form of Nāda, etc., assuming the stages of Parā, Paśyanti, etc., wherefrom originate the Svāra-s, Varṇa-s, Pada-s and Vākya-s galore. If not, the Deva (the dyad of ‘U’ and ‘M’) becomes utterly incapable of producing the Praṇava, becoming dumbfounded. While so, how dares one, who has acquired no merit, either to salute or to praise Thee (of the form of the Praṇava), O Goddess ! that art wörthy of being adored by Hari, Hara and Viriñca—as the deities of the components of the Praṇava ; Agni, Vāyu and Sūrya—their Ṛṣi-s ; Gāyat-tri, Triṣṭubh and Jagati—their metres ; Rakta, S'ukla and Kṛṣṇa—their colours ; Jāgrat, Svapna and Suṣupti—their states ; Bhūmi, Antarikṣa and Svarga—their seats ; Udātta, An-udātta and Svarita—their Svara-s ; Ṛk, Yajus and Sāman—their Veda-s ; Gārha-patyā, Āhavanīya and Dakṣiṇa—their Agni-s ; Prāhṇa, Madhyāhna and Aparāhṇa—their Kāla-s ; Sattva, Rajas and Tamas—their Guṇa-s ; Sṛṣṭi, Sthiti and Saṃhāra—their functions : all these standing in the order appropriate to them ?

9. Only in combination with the S'akti, (the group of sixteen vowels, representing the six Nityā-s'akti-s and the sixteen different modes of intonation), would Śiva, (the group of thirty-five consonants, taken individually and all of them taken collectively, representing the thirty-six Tattva-s in all), acquire the power of generating the several Veda-s, Purāṇa-s and other lore. Otherwise the Deva would become unpronounceable and meaningless. While so, how dares one, who has acquired no merit, either to salute or to praise Thee, O Goddess ! that art adored by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others, as the Alphabet made up of the vital vowels and consonants and all that they go to make up ?

10. Śiva, (the syllable ' Ka '), only when placed in juxtaposition with the Śakti, (the syllable ' E '), pronounced separately thereafter, would take the form of the sacred fifteen-syllabled or the sixteen-syllabled Mantra. If the initial syllable ' Ka ' is not so placed along with the syllable 'E', the Deva, (the syllable 'Ī', even though followed by) Ku-s'a-la, (the Pṛthvī-bija, 'La'), is impotent by itself to form a Mantra. Then, by (the dyad of 'Ha-s' and the dyad of 'Sa-s', respectively represented by the Sun and the Moon, indicated by the word) Hari; by Hara, (the syllable 'Ka'); by Viriñca, (the syllable 'Ka'); (by the dyad of 'La-s', represented by) Ādī, (the foremost of the gods); (thus producing the two sets of five and three syllables, viz., 'Ha Sa Ka Ha La' and 'Sa Ka La', which, along with the foregoing set of four syllables, viz., 'Ka E Ī La', constitute the three sets of twelve syllables in the aggregate); (and the three Hṛl-lekhā-s obtained from Hari-hara-vi-rim, in the following manner: the first 'Hṛim' from Hari-rim, the second from Hara-vi-rim, and the third from Hara-vi-rim, by suppressing the italicized and suitably combining them; thus getting the full-fledged Mantra, called the Pañca-daśākṣari (the fifteen-syllabled Mantra), with each of the three 'Hṛim-s' placed immediately after the three sets of syllables already obtained; by the suppression of the italicized in 'Śivah' (with which the stanza begins) and the addition of 'rim', the last syllable so far dealt with, 'Śrīm', the Bija of Cādi, (Lakṣmī who took birth before the Moon, indicated by 'Ca'), which, together with and pervading through the foregoing fifteen syllables, forms the Ṣoḍaśākṣari (the sixteen-syllabled Mantra). While so, how dares one, who has acquired no proficiency in Mantra-lore, either to salute or to praise Thee, O Goddess! that art of the form of Kādi-vidyā and that art meditated upon by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others, as assuming fifteen or sixteen diverse forms of the fifteen or sixteen syllables pervading the entire universe ?

11. Śiva, (the syllable 'Ha'), only when placed in juxtaposition with the Śakti, (the syllable 'Sa', thereafter), would take the form of the sacred fifteen-syllabled Mantra. If the initial syllable 'Ha' is not so placed along with the syllable 'Sa', the Deva, (the syllable 'Ka'), though followed by Ku-s'a-la, (the Pṛthvi-bija, 'La'), turns out to be powerless by itself to form a Mantra. Thus the first set of four syllables 'Ha Sa Ka La' is obtained. Again 'Ha' (standing for Śiva), 'Sa' (for the Śakti) and 'Ka' (for the Deva), as before, and Kha-lu (the Ākāś'a-bīja, 'Ha') and Ku-s'a-la (the Pṛthvi-bija, 'La') being placed thereafter, will yield the second set of five syllables, 'Ha Sa Ka Ha La'. Then, by Hari, (the syllable 'Sa', the Vāyu-bija), Hara, (the syllable 'Ka') and Viriñca, (the syllable 'La', which precedes, in the order of the Alphabet, the letter 'Va'), is yielded the third set of the three syllables 'Sa Ka La'; by adding the syllable 'Hrīm' to each of the three sets, after deriving the three 'Hrīm-s' from Hari-Hara-vi-riṃ : the first 'Hrīm' from Hāri-riṃ, the second from Hāra-vi-riṃ, and the third from Hāra-vi-riṃ by suppressing the italicized and suitably combining them, the full Mantra called the Pañca-das'ākṣari of the Hādi-vidyā, devoutly worshipped by Lopā-mudrā, is formed. While so, how dares one, who is unfit to worship Thee, not knowing Thy greatness, as described in the Dakṣiṇā-mūrti-saṃhitā, either to salute or to praise Thee ?

12. (The crude form,) 'Siva,' when under the influence of the Śakti, ('E' of the 'Ñe' of Pāṇini's technique, i.e., the dative singular termination, by superadding the indeclinable, 'Namaḥ', indicated by the same Śakti), would be capable of being formed into the Pañcākṣari-mantra, viz., 'Sivāya namaḥ'. If not, the Deva (the crude form 'Siva' is incapable of being pronounced as a Mantra, proclaiming the oneness of Siva and Sivā. Therefore, how dares one, who has no merit either to salute or to praise Thee, O Goddess ! that art of the form of the Pañcākṣari-mantra and so worshipped by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others ?

13. Only when Siva, (the Guru), is endowed with the Śakti (the accomplishments resulting from muttering the Srī-vidya-mantra, devotion to the Goddess of Srī-vidyā, etc.), would the Śiṣya be able to give a good account of himself, with the grace of the Guru, who is the embodiment of Paramesvara. If his grace is not so accomplished, even the Śiṣya, though shining otherwise, becomes incapable of acquiring even the smallest capacity. Hence, how dares one, who has acquired no merit, either to salute or to praise Thee, O Goddess ! the embodiment of the Guru-mūrti, that art worshipped as such by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others, as, otherwise, it would not be possible for them to understand the esoteric significance of the Mantra ?

14. Śiva, (the first digit of the waxing Moon, known as Dars'ā, which has the character of Śiva-tattva), only when conjoined with the Śakti, (the second digit of the same, known as Dr̥ṣṭā and of the character of Śakti-tattva) would be able to acquire the quality of being seen and to be hailed, in the heavens. If not, the Deva, (the first digit), is incapable of shining and gladdening the hearts of the world, so as to conduce to its welfare, as also to add to the grace of the remaining lunar digits, Dars'atā and others. Hence, how dares one, who has not accumulated religious merit in his previous incarnations, either to salute or to praise Thee, O Goddess! of the form of the eternal Candra-kalā, (the sixteenth digit), that art worthy of being worshipped by Hari, Hara, Viriñca and others ?

According to the Bhairava-yāmala, the Bindu of the Tri-koṇa and the three Cakra-s lying outside the Catur-dasāra, viz., the Aṣṭa-dala, the Ṣoḍaśa-dala and the Bhū-gṛha, these four are representative of Śiva ; while the Tri-koṇa, the Aṣṭa-koṇa, the Antar-dasāra, the Bāhir-dasāra and the Catur-dasāra are representative of the Śakti. Without their conjunction, the Srī-cakra, which may be taken to signify the origin of the world, cannot be formed. In other words, the universe will cease to be, when there will be the Mahā-pralaya, the final dissolution. The Vāmakes'vara-tantra says that Śiva ceases to have either name or manifestation, without the Śakti. The Devī-bhāgavata avers that Śiva, deprived of the Kuṇḍalinī-śakti, is but Śava, a corpse. Acyutānanda, a commentator, remarks that the creative Energy of the Śakti, in her three-fold aspects of Icchā—Will, Jñāna—Wisdom, and Kriyā—Activity, is essential for Śiva, to accomplish anything; and Hari, Hara and Viriñca stand for 'A', 'U' and 'M' respectively, the constituents of the Praṇava-mantra and the other Devatā-s referred to by the word, 'Ādi', are other Mantra-s. The Praṇava is the foremost Mantra of the Veda-s. Hence it follows that the Śakti is fit to be worshipped with the Praṇava and the other Veda-mantra-s. 'Haṃ', the Bija of Śiva, when combined with 'Saḥ', the Bija of the Śakti, yields the Haṃsa-mantra, which helps one to realize the import of the Mahā-vākya, 'Tat tvam asi', by reminding him of it, with its form 'So 'ham'. Again, Haṃsa, the cosmic breath, which is made up of 'Haṃ' (Śiva), the outgoing breath, and 'Saḥ' (the Śakti), the ingoing breath, symbolizes creation in the form of Evolution and dissolution in the form of Involution. Śiva and the Śakti (consonants and vowels, contributing to make up Akṣara-s (imperishables) remain as the Niṣ-kala-brahman, during the Pralaya, as Para-śiva and Śāntā, (transcending the thirty-six Eternal Verities), in a state of quiescence. Or Śāntā's awakening and operating on Śiva as the Śakti, there is brought about the creation of the world.

From the combination of Śiva and the Śakti, Kaivalyās'rama derives the Parā-prāsāda-mantra—'Hsauḥ' and the An-uttara-mantra—'Aḥ', wherein 'H' and 'A' stand for Śiva, and 'Sauḥ' and the Visarga for the Śakti respectively. He also derives the Pāsādi-try-akṣarī-mantra, made up of the triad of monosyllables, 'Āṃ Hrīm Krom' from 'Tvā "mā" rādhyāṃ hari-hara-viriñcādibhir api' of this stanza, construing it as —Thee (the Bhuvanes'vari, Hrīm¹) served (on one side) by 'Āṃ' (the Pās'a) and (on the other side) by Hari ('om'), Hara ('R'), and Viriñca ('K'), in the reverse order, i.e., 'Krom' (the Añkuśa).

The word 'Ādi' in 'Hari-hara-viriñcādibhiḥ' is wide enough to comprehend any number of Upāsaka-s with their characteristic ways of approaching the Goddess. So far as could be ascertained from Tantric literature, fifteen such Upāsaka-s with their characteristic Mantras are enumerated hereunder: (1) HARI—Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Ha La Hrīm, Sa Ka La Hrīm, Sa Ha Ka La Hrīm, Sa Ha Ka Ha La Hrīm, Sa Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm.¹ (2) HARA—Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Ha La Hrīm, Sa Ka La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka La Ha Sa Ka Ha La Sa Ka La Hrīm. (3) VIRIÑCA—Ka E Ī La Hrīm, Ha Ka Ha La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm. (4) MANU—Ka Ha E Ī La Hrīm, Ha Ka E Ī La Hrīm, Sa Ka E Ī La Hrīm. (5) CANDRA—Sa Ha Ka E Ī La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Ha E Ī La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka E Ī La Hrīm, (6) KUBERA—Ha Sa Ka E Ī La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Ha E Ī La Hrīm, Sa Ha Ka E Ī La Hrīm. (7) LOPA-MUDRA—Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Ha La Hrīm, Sa Ka La Hrīm. (8) AGASTYA—Ka E

¹ The fourth and sixth Khaṇḍa-s of this Vidyā are, according to the Jñānārṇava-tantra, Sa E Ī La Hrīm and Sa Ka E Ī La Hrīm respectively, as construed by Kaivalyās'rama.

Ī La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Ha La Hrīm, Sa Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm (9) NANDIKES'VARA—Sa E Ī La Hrīm, Sa Ha Ka Ha La Hrīm, Sa Ka La Hrīm. (10) SŪRYA—Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm, Sa Ha Ka La Hrīm, Sa Ka Ha La Hrīm. (11) SKANDA—Ha Sa Ka La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Sa Ka La Hrīm, Sa Ha Ka Ha La Hrīm. (12) MANMATHA—Ka E Ī La Hrīm, Ha Sa Ka Ha La Hrīm. Sa Ka La Hrīm. (13) S'AKRA—Ka E Ī La Hrīm, Ha Ka Ha La Hrīm, Sa Ka Ha La Hrīm (?). (14) DURVĀSAS—Ha Sa Ka La Ha Sa Ka Ha La Sa Ka La Hrīm.¹ (15) YAMA—Ka Ha E Ī La Hrīm, Ha La E Ī La Hrīm, Sa Ka E Ī La Hrīm.

According to a commentator, S'aṅkara-bhagavat-pāda, although he has ostensibly framed the entire work on the basis of the Pañca-das'ākṣara, is said to have not been entirely oblivious of the importance of the Ṣoḍas'ākṣarī, as may be inferred from the fact that in composing the first half of the first stanza, he has significantly made use of sixteen distinct words. The same question is further dwelt upon at length under stanza the thirty-second.

The Saundarya-lahari, in addition to dealing with all aspects of the Devī as the consort of Śiva, is also looked upon as a collection of Mantra-s possessed of considerable sanctity and merit. Each stanza has a Yantra with

Bijākṣara, prescribed courses of worship, Japa and a distinctive aim to be achieved by the practice of the Mantra.

The following general remarks may be offered regarding the worship of the Devī, with the Yantra and the Bijākṣara of the respective stanzas and the prayer of the Devī, with the muttering of the respective stanzas sitting before the Yantra, attended with the Pañcopacāra and other observances as detailed below. As the Yantra-s are themselves considered to be possessed of Caitanya, they are generally inscribed on gold plates. The worship in the case of each Yantra, is to the last for a prescribed number of days, and the formalities prescribed for each Yantra should be scrupulously adhered to, on each of the days of worship. Such worship is credited with the bestowal of specific fruits. In the case of one who is a successful adept in the practice of any other Mantra, the fruit of worship of the Mahā-tripura-sundarī with the muttering of these stanzas is easily accomplished. In the case of others, success depends on the faith and devotion brought to bear on the worship. It is considered reprehensible to put the efficacy of any Mantra to test. Should there be any delay or difficulty experienced by the worshipper, more devotion is the only sovereign remedy.

Viriñci, having gathered the tiniest speck of dust of Thy lotus-like feet, creates the worlds, leaving nothing to be desired ; S'auri carries the same with much effort on his thousand heads ; while Hara, pulverizing the same, smears (his body) with it, as though with ashes.

Viriñci—the same as Viriñcā of the first stanza ; both the words denote Brahman, the creator. Speck of dust—used in a collective sense, as otherwise the worlds could not ostensibly be created out of a single speck, nor would it require the thousand heads of S'auri to carry it with effort, nor would it be enough to smear the prodigious body of Hara with. Thy lotus-like feet—Thy : of Thee, the prime cause of all the worlds ; hence the dust on her feet acquires all her virtues. According to Kaṇāda, the founder of the Vais'eṣika school and Akṣa-pāda, the founder of the Nyāya school, the world is made up of the primary atoms of Earth, Water, Fire and Air, which, at the desire of Īs'vara, arrange themselves, in the first instance, into Dvy-aṇuka-s consisting of two atoms each, which, in their turn, arrange themselves into Try-aṇuka-s, consisting of three Dvy-aṇuka-s each. It is on groups of these Try-aṇuka-s, that the cosmogony of these two schools is based. Such a conception of the order of creation should not be considered as a mere surmise of the poet, as it is the fact that the Paramāṇu (of the Devi's feet) is the prime-cause of the creation of the world, that forms the basis of their theory. The worlds—both animate and inanimate. The seven upper worlds : Bhūr, Bhuvar, Suvar, Mahar, Jana, Tapas and Satya, as also the seven nether worlds : A-tala, Vi-tala, Su-tala, Rasā-tala, Talā-tala, Mahā-tala and Pātāla may also be meant. S'auri—Viṣṇu, the sustainer, who is said to be lifting the fourteen worlds, the nether seven in the form of S'imśumāra, a porpoise, and the upper seven as S'eṣa. Lakṣmī-dhara construes the word as Bala-bhadra, (the descendant of S'ūra, the Yādava-chief) lifting the worlds in the form of S'eṣa. It may however be noted that, according to Amara-siṃhā, S'auri is one of the recognized names of Viṣṇu and not of Bala-bhadra. Hara—Saṃhāra-rudra, the destroyer.

² संक्षुब्धैर्न.

The greatness of the Devī is borne testimony to by the abject dependence of the creator, the sustainer and the destroyer of the worlds on the dust of her feet, for carrying out their respective avocations. It is further enhanced by the fact, that the single speck of her feet provides material for the creator to create all the worlds, with their various contents. The same speck calls forth great effort from Viṣṇu, the thousand-headed, to lift its weight with his myriads of heads, and the mighty Saṃhāra-rudra, with his prodigious form, has to reduce this tiny speck to ashes, by way of destroying the worlds, for his Bhasma-snāna. Again, as observed by Kaivalyās'rama, the ashes are but the residuum left by all the elements and their various transformations, after the application of his Saṃhāra-s'akti by Rudra, with a view to smear his body with ashes, in conformity with the Mantra prescribed therefor. Further, the same commentator, fortified by Dattātreya's view, explains the esoteric significance of the speck of dust as follows: The Devī has four feet, named S'ukla, Rakta, Miśra and Nirvāṇa, the first two resting on the two-petalled lotus of the Ājñā-cakra, the third on the twelve-petalled lotus of the heart, and the fourth on the thousand-petalled lotus of the Dvā-dasānta, with Viṣṇu, Brahman, Rudra and Sadā-s'iva as their respective deities, who, assuming their characteristic Guṇa-s—Sattva, Rajas, Tamas and Guṇātītatva, through the speck of dust resting on the four feet, occupy themselves in their respective avocations of creation, sustenance, destruction and bathing in the nectar of the region of the Moon in the thousand-petalled lotus. Kames'vara-sūri, however, rebuts this view and points out that it runs counter to what S'amkara-bhagavat-pāda would uphold, as, everywhere in the entire work, he refers to only one pair of feet of the Devī, and that as such it is far-fetched, and adds that if it was meant merely to derive the three Guṇa-s of Hari, Viriñci and Hara, that could as well be attained by explaining that the speck of dust, being of variegated colours, partakes of the three Guṇa-s. Kaivalyāsrama's view may, however, be reconciled by pointing out that his exposition is only esoteric and should not be taken to hold good to the very letter.

Excluding the thousand-petalled Cakra, reference has been made above to the two Cakra-s, viz., Ājñā and An-āhata. These, along with four others, are centres of psychic energy in the human body. They are: (1) Mūlā-dhāra of four petals, in the region lying two Aṅgula-s above the anus: (2) Svādhiṣṭhāna of six petals, in the region of the genitals; (3) Maṇi-pūra of ten petals, in the region of the navel; (4) An-āhata of twelve petals, in the region of the heart; (5) Visuddhi of sixteen petals, in the region of the throat; and

(6) Ājñā of two petals, in the region between the eyebrows. When meditating upon these Cakra-s, the four letters from 'Va' to 'Sa' should be thought of as resting on the four petals of the Mūlādhāra, the six letters from 'Ba' to 'La' on the six petals of the Svādhiṣṭhāna, the ten letters from 'Ḍa' to 'Pha' on the ten petals, of the Maṇi-pūra, the twelve letters from 'Ka' to 'Ṭha' on the twelve petals of the An-āhata, sixteen letters from 'A' to 'Visarga' on the sixteen petals of the Visuddhi, and the two letters 'Ha' and 'Kṣa' on the two petals of the Ājñā-cakra.

(Thou art) the stream, ever flowing with the honey of the cluster-of-flowers of consciousness, for the dull-witted ; (Thou art) the Cintā-mañi-duplicate (in bestowing their heart's desire) on the destitute ; and the tusk of the Wild Boar (Avatāra) of Mura-ripu, in the case of those submerged in the ocean of births (and deaths).

Thou—the rendering of the original word 'Bhavatī' stands for the Devī. With the reading 'Bhavatī', meaning 'becomes', 'Pāṃsu', 'the speck of dust' of the previous stanza, will have to be understood as the subject. The island-city of the Suns—this may be taken to mean some imaginary island in the middle of the ocean, wherefrom the disc of the Sun apparently rises above the horizon. The implication is that the Sun of knowledge dispels the darkness of ignorance from the mind of the wordly-minded. As the internal darkness, accumulated during numberless previous births, is so intense as to occupy every nook and corner of the mind of the person harbouring it, one commentator is of the view that the Mihira, the Sun, refers to the twelve Āditya-s,¹ rising simultaneously with all their effulgence from their island-abode, so as to drive away even the smallest vestige of such darkness. The reading 'Timira-mihiroddipana-karī,' (in the Fem.

¹ The twelve Āditya-s are—(1) Dhātṛ, (2) Mītra, (3) Aryaman, (4) Rudra, (5) Varuṇa, (6) Sūrya, (7) Bhaga, (8) Vivasvat, (9) Pūṣan, (10) Savitṛ, (11) Tvāṣṭṛ and (12) Viṣṇu.

gender) meaning 'causing the Sun of knowledge to manifest itself in all its glory,' if adopted, will not permit of 'Pāṃsu' (Mas. gender) being taken as the subject, while it will make complete sense with the reading 'Bhavatī'. The ignorant—not possessed of Vidyā, which may be construed as either Devatā-jñāna or Ātma-jñāna, i.e., mere Karmaṭha-s, who indulge in the observance of Jyotiṣṭoma and other rituals according to the rules prescribed in the Karma-kāṇḍa, or those that are under the delusion that the world entirely depends on Brahman, Viṣṇu and Rudra, while in reality it hangs on the mercy of the Devī, whose dependants these three gods are. The cluster of flowers—i.e., all forms of consciousness. Cintā-maṇi-duplicate—Cintā-maṇi is the gem said to be in the possession of Indra and is credited with the power of bestowing whatever is thought of by its Upāsaka-s. Here the Devī is figuratively represented to be the duplicate of the gem with all its powers, as she is the embodiment of the Dāna-s'akti. According to one commentator, 'Cintā-maṇi-guṇanikā' means a rosary of Cintā-maṇi beads. Mura-riṇu—Viṣṇu, the destroyer of Mura, a demon. The reference here is to the incarnation of Viṣṇu in the form of a Wild Boar, who is said to have lifted on his tusk the submerged worlds and rescued them after vanquishing Hiraṇyākṣa, his foe.

Kameśvara-sūri takes the first line of the stanza to imply that the Devī dispels the darkness of ignorance pervading the minds of those that hold the view that Avidyā is the root-cause of the world, by imparting the true knowledge of Īśvara. He takes the second line to imply the dispelling of the ignorance of the Sāṃkhya-s who believe that the Jaḍa, non-sentient Mūla-prakṛti, is the cause of the worlds, by the adoption of similar means. Again he takes the third line to imply that the Devī warns the Paramāṇu-vādin-s, who hold the primary atoms to be the cause of the world, to be more circumspect, should they be disposed to arrive at the correct theory. The last line implies, according to him, the questionable ways adopted by the least evolved persons immersed in satiating their carnal instincts and appetites in their everyday-life, and suggests the remedial measure of the precepts in the Mahā-bhārata and other works bearing on right conduct, as the means of saving them.

According to Kaivalyāsrama, this stanza is indicative of the deity of the

who should be meditated upon, by all votaries of the Srī-vidyā, as effulgent with the radiance of myriads of morning Suns, holding in her four hands the rosary of crystal beads, the sugar-cane-bow, Cupid's five arrows and the Holy Writ, as having three eyes and wearing the crescent-moon as her crest-jewel. He is also of opinion that the Vāg-bhava-bija, 'Aim' of the Tri-purā, which occupies the forefront of the three Bija-s, Vāg-bhava, Kāma-rāja, and Śakti, is indicated by the stanza, for the reason that 'Aim' is composed of 'A', the initial letter of the Ṛg-veda, 'A', that of the Sāma-veda, and 'I', that of the Yajur-veda, construed as follows: The initial letters of the Sāma-veda and the Yajur-veda combined go to form 'E', and with the initial letter of the Ṛg-veda placed before and combined with it, would result in 'Ai', which, with the nasal Ardha-mātrā of the Upaniṣad-s, becomes 'Aim', the Trayi-mayī-vidyā, which has the virtues of dispelling Avidyā, ignorance, with the first 'A', of removing Jaḍatva, non-sentience, with the second 'A', and of bestowing one's heart's desires with 'I' and Kaivalya with the Ardha-mātrā.

(O Goddess), who affordest shelter to all the (fugitive) worlds! The league of gods, save Thee, dispels fear and bestows boons with two hands. Indeed, Thou alone dost not demonstrate the boon-bestowing and fear-dispelling gestures (with Thy hands). For, Thy feet, by themselves, are proficient in affording immunity from fear and bestowing boons transcending (one's) desire.

Who affordest shelter—Śaraṇyā, the Samskr̥t equivalent, means 'who affords shelter'. It may also be taken to signify, 'who has the Śrī-cakra as her worthy (Śaraṇa) abode'. All the fugitive worlds—the worlds that have their origin in the feet of the Devī, seeking shelter at the very place of their origin; what is more, the very gods, who pose with their hands the dispelling of fear and the granting of boons, themselves seek shelter at the Devī's feet. Thou alone dost not demonstrate—Evidently this refers to the fact that, whereas the gods merely employ their hands for posing, the Devī, the unique Goddess that she is, even though she has four hands, engages them otherwise, in carrying the Pāś'a, the Aṅkus'a, the sugar-cane-bow and arrows, and, at the same time, causes her feet to do not merely what the other gods profess to do, but even more in granting what her devotees seek at her hands. It is worthy of note that while some of the gods are capable of granting Svarga-bhoga and others Mokṣa alone, the Devī bestows on her votaries both the enjoyment of celestial pleasures and liberation. Gestures—the Abhaya-da-posture assumed by the right palm uplifted, as if to denote ‘do not fear’, and the Vara-da-posture with the left palm pointing downwards, as if to indicate readiness to give. The Bālā-mantra ‘Aim Klim Sauḥ’ is indicated by this stanza.

Having adored Thee, the bestower of prosperity to those that make obeisance before Thee, Hari, of yore, assumed the form of a damsel and fascinated even the destroyer of the (three) Pura-s. Smara likewise, by worshipping Thee, is powerful enough to rouse the passion of even great sages, with a (charming) frame fit to be licked by Rati's eyes.

Adored Thee—meditated upon the Devī by worshipping her in the form of the Srī-cakra and muttering the Vidyā, viz., the Pañca-daśākṣari, which is of her shape. There is a peculiar appropriateness in Viṣṇu worshipping the Devī, as he is the seer of the first Khaṇḍa of the Pañca-daśākṣari, as well as the first Prastāra, made up of the Lopā-mudrā- and the Nandikes'vara-vidyās, as mentioned in the Jñānārṇava-tantra. Prosperity—implies beauty of form, fine accomplishments, progeny, opulence, etc. Of yore—Lakṣmī-dhara narrates the incident of Kanaka-svāmin, whom Viṣṇu fascinated in the form of a beautiful damsel and eventually killed, when requested by Śiva to appear before him in that form, Viṣṇu did so, with the result depicted in the stanza. Other commentators take it back to the days of the churning of the ocean by the Deva-s and the Dānava-s for the extraction of nectar, when Viṣṇu is said to have appeared as Mohini, whose beauty so enraptured the Dānava-s that they were altogether deceived by Viṣṇu at the time of the distribution of the nectar and were thus rendered mortal. The rest of the story is as narrated by Lakṣmī-dhara. This only enhanced the powers of the Devī, as, after all, Viṣṇu, as a true worshipper given to muttering constantly the syllable, 'Īm', denoting her Kāma-kalā form, assumed her form, i.e., that of the loveliest woman imaginable and attracted the attention of even Śiva, the saintliest among the gods and the destroyer of Manmatha. Smara likewise—likewise, i.e., with equal potency and in the same manner as Viṣṇu, Smara, Manmatha, who, along with his consort Rati, is first worshipped at the entrance to the holy of holies at the time of worship of the Tri-pura-sundarī, is the seer of the Pañca-das'ākṣari of three Khaṇḍa-s, which, with the Śri-bīja, 'Śrīṃ' as the fourth Khaṇḍa, becomes the Sodas'ākṣari of the Śrī-vidyā, with the sixteen Nityā-s constituting the sixteen Kalā-s, which, again, with its four 'Īm-s', takes its origin from the Ṛg-veda-mantra, 'Catvāra Īm bibhrati kṣemayantaḥ'. Those who attach greater sanctity to the Kādi-vidyā of fifteen syllables (than to the Hādi-vidyā of an equal number of syllables) hold that the former, by itself answers to the description of the Ṛg-veda-mantra, as it contains four 'Ī-s'. But this construction of 'Catvāra Īṃ bibhrati' is defective from the point of view of syntax and for the reason that the Mantra contains one 'Ī' and three 'Īṃ-s' and, with a view to conform to the requirement of the Vedic text, the three 'Ī-s' (of the Hṛīṃ-s therein) are separated and, together with the 'Ī' of the Vīdvā, are made to answer to the description of the Vedic text. On the other hand, the Mūla-vidyā of sixteen syllables, made up of four Khaṇḍa-s, each of them containing an 'Īm', is on all fours with the requirements of the Vedic text. This view is also supported by the Taittirīya-brāhmaṇa III, x, 1 and 10.

Acyutānanda derives from this stanza the Sādhya-siddhāśana-vidyā —

'Hṛīṃ, Kṛīṃ, Bṛīṃ', the fourth of the Catur-āśana - nyāsar in the following manner: 'H' and 'R' from 'Hariḥ'; 'Īṃ' from 'Jana-nīṃ'; Kṛīṃ, the Kāma-bija, as indicated by the word 'S m a r a'; 'V', (which is the same as 'B') from 'Vapuṣā', 'Le' from 'Lehya', and 'M' from 'Muninām'.

 ped, having obtained some grace from Thy

One phase of the greatness of Anaṅga, the formless Manmatha, due to the grace of the Devī and redounding to his credit, i.e., his subjugating the unconquerable will and rousing the passions of great sages, has been dealt with in the previous stanza. Yet another phase, which further enhances the greatness of this seer of the Prastāra called after him, is referred to in this stanza, viz., though ill-equipped as a warrior, i.e., with flimsy weapons, poor following and no armament worth the name, he has won the unique distinction of being the conqueror of the world, all due to the marvellous effect of the Devi's side-glance cast on him, as if to recompense him for the loss of his body, which was burnt to ashes by the fire from the third eye (the Jñāna-cakṣus) of S'iva, her Lord, when his Yoga was sought to be disturbed by Manmatha, in his attempt to rouse the passion of S'iva for his Mountain-bride, the Devi.

'Kliṃ', the Kāma-bija, is indicated by this stanza and could be derived therefrom in the following manner: 'K' from 'Kām api', 'L' from 'Malaya', 'Ī' from 'Maurvī' and the Anusvāra from 'Pauspaṃ'.

The great Pride (incarnate) of the Vanquisher of the (three) Pura-s—According to Ḍiṇḍima, a commentary, Ś'iva is very fond of worshipping in this form the Devī, to whom he is so devoted. Āho-puru- ṣikā—the Saṁskṛt

 equivalent of 'Pride', may be construed in two different ways:

'Aho' is the interjection indicating surprise, 'Puruṣa'
 is the Pratyag-ātman, which is the same as the ‘Aham’, ‘I’. Hence the abstract noun from the compound formed would mean ‘the Pride incarnate’, which, being of the redoubtable Mahā-deva, is the ‘great Pride incarnate’, or ‘Aho’ means the ‘Ātman’, ‘I’, which with ‘Puruṣa’ would mean, ‘verily, I am the Puruṣa’; hence ‘Āho-puruṣikā’, means ‘the state of being such Puruṣa, possessed of the self-consciousness indicative of having the Śakti as his Devī.’ Pura-mathitṛ—is the Śiva who is the vanquisher of the three Pura-s; this may also be construed as ‘the extractor of the three syllables’, forming the Tri-purā-bija, ‘Aṁ Klīm Sauḥ’, which, according to the Rudra-yāmala, the great god extracted as the essence, after churning the Saṁskṛt Alphabet therefor, even as one churns the curds for the extraction of butter. The coupling of the words ‘Pura-mathitṛ’ and ‘Āho-puruṣikā’, in a way, indicates the necessity for the worship of the two conjointly, so beautifully elaborated in the first stanza. Jingling—so as to be heard in the heart-lotus of the meditating Yogin. Wielding a bow, etc.—The Devī carries in her lower left arm the sugar-cane-bow with a string of bees, in her lower right arm the five arrows of Kamala, Rakta-kairava, Kahlāra, Indivara, and Sahakāra flowers; in her upper left arm the Pāśa, noose, shining like coral, and in her upper right arm the Aṅkuśa, goad, shining like the crescent. These weapons of the Devī are said to assume the Sthūla (gross), the Sūkṣma (Mantra-maya), and the Para (Vāsanā-maya) forms. The first of these has been indicated above. As for the subtle form assumed by them, the bow is of the form of the syllable ‘Tham’, the five arrows of the forms of 'Drām', 'Drīm', 'Klīm', 'Blūm' and 'Saḥ', the Pāśa of 'Hrīm' and the Aṅkuśa of 'Krom'. As for the Para-rūpa in the form of Vāsanā, the bow is the Manas, the five arrows are the five Tan-mātra-s, sound, touch, etc., passions constitute the Pāśa, while anger is the Aṅkuśa. Before us—i.e., in our Hṛdaya-kamala; moving from the Maṇi-pūra on to the An-āhata of the heart-lotus, while we are in the act of meditating on the Devī. The resplendent form of the Devī is of three aspects, gross, subtle and of the form of Vāsanā. The Sthūla form has been described above; the Sūkṣma aspect is of the form of the Pañca-das'ākṣari or the Ṣoḍas'ākṣari, as the case may be; and the Para aspect is the Kuṇḍalīnī-sakti itself. The esoteric significance of this stanza is that Śiva, the Prakāśa, becomes conscious of himself, only when reflected in the Devī, the Vimars'āṃśa.

From this stanza is said to be derived the Vas'īnī-bija, 'Blūm',¹ thus: 'B' from the word 'Bāṇān', 'L' from 'Kara-talaiḥ', 'Ū' from 'Pura-mathituḥ', and the Bindu from 'Āstām'.

Blessed are the few that serve Thee, the flood of Consciousness and Bliss, having, as Thy abode, the mattress of Parama-s'iva, laid on the couch of the (multi-triangular) form of S'ivā, in the mansion built of Cintā-maṇi-stones, attached to the pleasure-garden of Nīpa trees, in the isle of gems, surrounded by an avenue of Kalpa trees and situated amidst the ocean of nectar.

Blessed are the few—the few: those rare souls who, through worship, internal as well as external, of the Devī, their affinity to the Pañca-daśākṣarī, and the pure life that they lead during their last incarnate existence in this mundane world, are really blessed, for, they have discharged the duties incumbent upon human beings, preparatory to their being merged in the transcendent Existence, Consciousness and Bliss. Serve Thee—worship Thee in the S'ri-cakra. This stanza refers to the worship of the S'ri-cakra as the Viyac-cakra (Ethereal centre), worshipped externally as on the pedestal, with the symbol inscribed on a Bhūrja leaf, a piece of clean linen, gold or silver plate, as is the practice of the Kaula-s, and internally in the ethereal space, Dahara, of the heart, as is the practice of the Samayin-s. The mode of worship indicated in this stanza is of the form of the Devī, as abiding in her mansion, the Srī-cakra, dealing as it does with the special environment in which the Devī has to be meditated upon, herself assuming the special form depicted in the previous stanza, which only amplifies what is here indicated about the Devī. The description given here closely follows the account given in the Bhairava-yāmala, which represents the Devī, as abiding for ever as the Kuṇḍalinī-śakti, piercing the solar region of the Dahara, covering the Brahma-randhra inside the thousand-petalled lotus, liquifying the lunar region, and delighting in the flood of nectar flowing therefrom. The Kuṇḍalinī, abiding in the Kula-patha, the Suṣumnā path, leaves it to reach the Sahasrāra and, after filling the entire system of Nāḍi-s with the nectar above referred to, returns to her abode¹, the Svādhiṣṭhāna, and sleeps therein. Ocean of nectar—stands for the Baṇḍava-sthāna, the quadrilateral seat of the Bindu, which is the essential one and brings within its scope the forty-three triangles forming the Srī-cakra, the mansion of the Devī. The five triangles pointing upwards may be said to represent the five rows of Kalpa trees forming a fence around the mansion. Of the form of Sivā—i.e., 'E', multi-triangular, the Srī-cakra, her abode, being made up of forty-three triangles. The couch—The Devī is said to recline on a couch made up of Brahman, Hari, Rudra and Īśvara as the four feet, occupying the South-east, South-west, North-west and North-east corners respectively, Sadā-sīva as the plank, Para-sīva, the All-witness, transcending the three Guṇa-s, turned by the Devī's glance into the mattress, not to speak of the other gods serving other purposes, all because of their desire to serve the Goddess, they being capable of assuming any desired form, as they are Kāma-rūpa-s.

This stanza is deftly enough made by Kames'vara-sūri to bear on 'the Ānanda-laharī', the first part of this work, as follows: Sura-viṭapi-vāṭī, etc.—full of pilgrim resorts, such as Śrī-saila and other abodes of the several gods reputed to bestow the heart's desires of pilgrims, very much like the Kalpa trees. Maṇi-dvīpa is to be understood as, 'wherein are various places specially fitted for meditation'; Cintā-maṇi-grhā, as, 'wherein there are temples studded with Cintā-maṇi gems'; Sudhā-sindhoh, as meaning, 'from the Hīmālaya, the abode of white glaciers, to the southern ocean'; Sivākāre mañce, as, 'Mount Kailāsa, which is as white as crystal and thus resembles Śīva in aspect'; Parama-siva-paryāyika-nīlayām, as, 'blessed by being placed on the lap of the divine couple, Pārvati and Parama-sīva'; Cid-ānanda-laharīm, as "the work of the name of 'Ānanda-laharī', expounding the purely Cit-aspect of the Śakti". The story is that Śaṅkara-bha-gavat-pāda, the author of this work, after finishing it, took it all the way to Kailāsa, there to lay it at the feet of the divine couple and receive their approbation, but on reaching Kailāsa, to his wonder, saw the couple being praised with the stanzas of the self-same Ānanda-laharī and in consequence drenched in the Bliss of Supreme Consciousness.

This stanza is capable of yet another interpretation, which is this : " Blessed are the few that adore Thee, the Cid-ānanda-laharī, who ever abidest in the An-āhata of the heart-lotus, situated midway between Sudhā, the Mūlādhāra (or the feet), on the one side, and the Moon in the crest ever filling the system of Nāḍi-s with nectar, on the other, of the human body, adorable because it embraces in its form all the gods and contains the substitutes for the several reputed places of pilgrimage, such as S'ri-s'aila, in the crest, etc., (or the heart-lotus, the seat of Cintā, thought, dependent on the Ātman and therefore lustrous), well-protected by the ten vital airs, Prāṇa and others (or the deities presiding over the ten organs of sense), studded with the Mūlādhāra and other centres of Energy, radiant like so many isles of gems and encasing within itself the Jīva, which is as expansive as a tree from top to bottom."

The expression 'Parama-siva-paryāṅka-nīlayām' suggests, by implication, the union of Parama-siva, the Bindu with the Parā-s'akti, the Nāda, in the Oṃkāra, the couch made up of 'A', 'U', 'M' and the Ardha-mātrā, representing Brāhman, Hari, Rudra and Īśvara. The name of the Devi, 'Pañca-brahmāsanasthitā,' as given in the Lalitā-sahasra-nāma-stotra, is further illustrated by this stanza.

The Bija of Kameś'varī, 'Klīm,' and that of Mahā-preta, 'Hsauḥ', may be derived from this stanza.

having pierced through the Earth situated in the Mūlādhāra, the Water in the Maṇi-pūra, the Fire abiding in the Svādhiṣṭhāna, the Air in the Heart (An-āhata), the Ether above (the Visuddhi), and Manas between the eyebrows (the Ājñā) and thus broken through the entire Kula-path.

This stanza contains in a nutshell the quintessence of the sublimest truths of the Vedānta and the Yoga systems in harmonious combination, in relation to the worship of the Devī, as the Kuṇḍalini-s'akti of the Piṇḍāṇḍa, (Microcosm) and as the Tri-pura-sundarī of the Brahmāṇḍa, (Macrocosm). For a proper appreciation of the same, a short account of the Eternal Verities, according to the conception of the ancient Ṛṣi-s of India and their bearing on the Cosmogony of the Microcosm and the Macrocosm, will be found useful.

An Eternal Verity may be defined as that which gives scope for functioning to all orders of creation, till their final dissolution. Some Tantra-s classify the Eternal Verities into three groups, the Ātma-tattva-s, the Vidyā-tattva-s and the Śiva-tattva-s. Those comprised under the first group are characterized by Jaḍatva, non-sentience; those of the second group partake of Jaḍatva and Prakāśakatva, both non-sentience and sentience; and those of the third group are characterized by Prakāśakatva, sentience pure and simple, with absolute Consciousness standing above them all. According to the

Kalpa-sūtra-s, twenty-four fall under the first group, seven under the second, and five under the third, and may be arranged as shown hereunder, with their characteristic properties: (1) Pr̥thivī—Earth, possessed of solidity; (2) Ap—Water, possessed of fluidity; (3) Tejas—Fire, possessed of heat; (4) Vāyu—Air, of the character of perpetual motion; (5) Ākāśa—Ether, of the character of space; (6) Gandha-tan-mātra—Smell, in the form of subtle Earth; (7) Rasa-tan-mātra—Taste, in the form of subtle Water; (8) Rūpa-tan-mātra—Form, in the form of subtle Fire; (9) Sparsa-tan-mātra—Touch, in the form of subtle Air; (10) Śabda-tan-mātra—Sound, in the form of subtle Ether; (11) Śrotra—the auditory sense that perceives sound; (12) Tvac—the tactile sense that perceives touch; (13) Cakṣus—the optic sense that perceives form; (14) Jihvā—the gustatory sense that perceives taste; (15) Ghrāṇa—the olfactory sense that perceives smell; (16) Vāc—speech, the motor organ of articulate expression; (17) Pāṇi—the hand, the motor organ of grasping and leaving; (18) Pāda—the foot, the motor organ of locomotion; (19) Pāyu—the motor organ of evacuation; (20) Upastha—the motor organ of generation and carnal pleasure; (21) Manas—the Mind, the inner sense that is attained, when Rajas, the mobility of misery, preponderates over Sattva and Tamas, the rhythm of happiness and the inertia of delusion, and which is the root of all volition; (22) Buddhi—the Intellect, the inner sense which is attained, when rhythm preponderates over mobility and inertia, and as such is at the root of all conviction

(23) Ahaṁ-kāra—Egoism, the inner sense which is attained, when inertia preponderates over rhythm and mobility, and which is the root of all fancy, converging towards the self; (24) Prakṛti, otherwise known as the Citta—which is attained by the equipoised state of rhythm, mobility and inertia; (25) Puruṣa or the Jīva (of the Microcosm)—which, though full in itself, commands only to a limited extent the five powers detailed below; (26) Kalā—the Kriyā-s'akti, the power to do all things, but to a limited extent, inhering in the Jīva; (27) Avidyā, also called Vidyā—the Jñāna-s'akti, in a veiled form and thus limited in its operation, inherent in the Jīva; (28) Rāga—the Ichchā-s'akti, perpetual satisfaction, which operates only partially and is therefore limited in extent, inherent in the Jīva; (29) Cit-s'akti—perpetuity inherent in the Jīva, when limited by the operation of the six changes denoted by 'exists', 'takes birth', 'grows', 'ripens', 'waned', and 'perishes'; (30) Niyati—that which causes Avidyā to veil the Ānanda-s'akti, absolute independence, inherent in the Jīva; (31) Māyā—the condition operating upon the Īśvara, causing it to look upon the phenomenal world as 'this', i.e., an entity separate from itself; (32) Suddha-vidyā—the condition operating upon the Sadā-s'iva, causing it to identify itself with the phenomenal world, with the impression, 'I am this'; (33) Mahesvara—that which is operated upon by the Māyā; (34) Sadā-s'iva—that which is operated upon by the Suddha-vidyā; (35) S'akti—the desire which is but the impression of the world to be created; (36) S'iva—

the absolute non-differentiated existence, when conditioned by the S'akti.

Fifteen more are added to the number of Eternal Verities by some, by a process of further elaboration, thus making fifty-one in all, answering to the fifty-one letters of the Samskr̥t Alphabet. The other fifteen are the seven Dhātu-s, humours, (1) Tvac—the external sheath of organs; (2) Asrj—blood; (3) Māṃsa—flesh; (4) Medas—fat; (5) Asthi—bone; (6) Majjā—marrow and (7) Sukla—semen; the five vital airs, (8) Prāṇa, (9) Apāna, (10) Vyāna, (11) Udāna, (12) Samāna; and the three Guṇa-s, (13) Rhythm, (14) Mobility and (15) Inertia. The five Elements, the five Tan-mātra-s, the five organs of perception, the five organs of motor action, the Mind, the Māyā, the S'uddha-vidyā, the Mahes'vara and the Sadā-s'iva are the twenty-five Eternal Verities from the Vedic standpoint, while the others are capable of being included in the twenty-five.

In this stanza, the Devī of the Macrocosm, in the form of her exact prototype, the Kuṇḍalinī of the Microcosm, is represented as having broken through the entire Kula-path containing the six Cakra-s of psychic energy, indicative of the twenty-one Tattva-s, to reach her Lord in the Sahasrāra, the habitat of the four remaining sentient Tattva-s, there to divert herself in secrecy with her Lord. Even as Parama-s'iva, in the absence of his conjunction with the Tri-pura-sundarī, is powerless, so also the Jiva, without the operation of the Kuṇḍalinī, will be very much the same as a corpse. The vital force, which is inherent in every limb, muscle, nerve-centre and other physiological organs and which causes the entire frame to function, is but one aspect of the Kuṇḍalinī. It is the self-same vital force that is the root-cause of the functioning of the entire phenomenal world and could be comprehended only by those rare mortals who have gained mastery over it. It is upon this fundamental fact that the system of Yoga is based, as the Prāṇāyāma, or the control of this vital force, forms the bedrock of that system. If only the secret of control of this vital force and the human mind (psychic force), which is only a subtle variety of the vital force, should be mastered by any person, he may be said to have conquered the phenomenal world. No wonder the Yogin takes his stand upon the Prāṇāyāma and Mano-laya for the successful accomplishment of the state of Samādhi, his goal. It is with that end in view that the Yogin concentrates his mind, controls the vital force and projects them towards the Mūlādhāra, the first psychic centre of energy, which results in the rousing of the Kuṇḍalinī, dormant with its form of three-and-a-half spirals coiled therein. Those that are proficient in the Yoga-sāstra hold that this machine of the human frame, which is controlled by the Kuṇḍalinī, contains Seventy-two Thousand Nāḍī-s, the main ones among them, e.g., the Suṣumnā, the Idā, the Piṅgalā, etc., having distinct functions connected with the respiratory system allotted to them, and the other important Nāḍī-s controlling the sensory and motor organs. The psychic energy requisite to control the various organs is said to abide in the six Cakra-s of the Suṣumnā-path, provided with the three stages, known as the Rudra-, Viṣṇu-, and Brahma-granthi-s (knots), which are respectively the regions of Fire, the Sun and the Moon, each of them situated at the end of a pair of these Cakra-s, in the order given above. In the case of ordinary mortals, their vital energy is wasted through the Iḍā and Piṅgalā, but in the case of the initiated, it is regulated in such a way that the Prāṇa, coursing through the Iḍā and Piṅgalā, and also the Apāna, are made to conserve the purpose of rousing the Kuṇḍalinī and sending her up to the Brahma-randhra.

All impulses, psychic and organic, may be classified as volitional, cognitional and actional, corresponding to the Icchā-, Jñāna- and Kriyā-s'akti-s of the Devī. These, when pertaining to the body, are attributable to the Kuṇḍalinī, while the corresponding cosmic impulses are attributable to the Tri-pura-sundarī.

Thou—in the form of the Tri-pura-sundarī of the Macrocosm and the Kuṇḍalinī of the Microcosm. Thy Lord—the Śiva of the Macrocosm and the Jīva of the Microcosm, bereft of Māyā, illusion. The thousand-petalled lotus—which is no other than the upper Śrī-cakra, the Bindu of which represents the Śiva and the Jīva bereft of Māyā, as the case may be. This is the final resort, the Nīrvāṇa of the accomplished seeker, lying beyond the Kula-path, the Suṣūmṇā-mārga, which contains the six Cakra-s mentioned in the stanza, in the ascending order of subtlety, with the three Granthi-s in their appropriate places. The Sahasrāra is considered to be the inner Śrī-cakra to be meditated upon with all the fifty-one letters of the Saṃskṛt Alphabet. The view is taken by some that the Bindu has its position in the Bindu of the Cakra and the other fifty letters are to be arranged consecutively over the thousand petals, twenty times. Suddha-vidyā in coalescence with Sadāśiva is known as the Sādākhyā or the Paramātman, which may be characterized as the twenty-sixth Tattva, on the attainment of which is experienced Nirvāṇa or Jīvanmukti. It is this aspect that is referred to in this stanza as the diversion of the Devī in secrecy with her Lord. Having pierced through—i.e., having got beyond, after overcoming and absorbing in her own form. The ascent and the descent of the Kuṇḍalīnī constituting the Kuṇḍalīnī-yoga are said to form an Antar-yāga. The Earth situated in the Mūlādhāra—but for the Mūlādhāra, which partakes of the character of the Earth-element through its subtle form of Gandha-tan-mātra, the body will become unstable with its equilibrium disturbed. This Cakra is no other than the Tri-koṇa of the Srī-cakra. Piercing through this element would mean conquering it. The Yogin who does so is said to attain the power of penetration through massive stone walls, etc. Water in the Maṇi-pūra—Maṇi-pūra, the interior of which the Devī is said to fill with gems; hence the practice among the Samayin-s of the offering of jewels studded with various kinds of gems, while meditating on her in this seat. Although the Maṇi-pūra is the third in the order of the Cakra-s, it has been given the second place in the stanza to suit the order of the elements. This Cakra represents water in its Rasa-tan-mātra form. Conquest of this by the Yogin is said to confer on him the next higher power of mastery, such as floating, walking, etc., over water. The inner Dasāra of the Srī-cakra is indicated by this. The Fire in the Svādhiṣṭhāna—where the Devī is said to take her stand in the form of Kuṇḍalinī, of her own accord, making the knot of Rudra-granthi thereon. The fire, in the form of the Rūpa-tan-mātra. The conquest of this by the Yogin is credited with the bestowal of the power of fire-walking, etc. The Aṣṭa-koṇa of the Srī-cakra is indicated by this. The Air in the heart—the Air, in the form of Spars'a-tan-mātra. The heart signifies the An-āhata-cakra of the heart-lotus. The word 'An-āhata' means the Nāda, sound, produced without impact in the recess of the heart; hence the name of the Cakra. The outer Dasāra of the Srī-cakra is indicated by this. By the conquest of Air, the Yogin is said to attain the fleetness of wind, buoyancy, etc. The Ether—in the form of Śabda-tan-mātra. Above—i.e., 'above the heart', by which is meant the Cakra which is clear as crystal, viz., the Visuddhi. The Catur-dasāra of the Srī-cakra is indicated by this. By the conquest of this the Yogin attains the power of traversing the ethereal regions. It may be noted here that Pūrṇānanda-svāmin, the author of the Ṣaṭ-cakra-nirūpaṇa and other Tāntrika-s are of the view that the elements, Earth, Water, Fire, Air and Ether have, as their corresponding Cakra-s, the Mūlādhāra, the Svādhiṣṭhāna, the Maṇipūra, the An-āhata and the Visuddhi, which, as will be seen from this stanza, is at variance with the view of Śaṅkara-bhagavat-pāda, the author of this work, who has, in this respect, the support of the Vāmakes'vara-tantra in his favour, as explained by Bhāskara-rāya in his Setu-bandha.¹ Further, the letters indicated by the Māhes'vara-sūtra-s—"Ha Ya Va Raṭ" and "Laṇ", which enumerate the Bīja-s of the five elements in the order in which they were revealed by Mahes'vara's Damaru, when placed in juxtaposition with the names of the five Cakra-s in their natural order, from the upper to the nether, the names of the five elements corresponding to the respective Bīja-s, as also the names of the parts of the Srī-cakra which they indicate, in the Samhāra-krama, bear out, beyond doubt, the correctness of the author's view.² Manas between the eyebrows—Manas, which embraces within itself the five senses of perception and the five senses of motor action, i.e., in all, eleven Tattva-s. 'Between the eyebrows' refers to the Ājñā-cakra, so called because it is at this stage that a speck of knowledge about the Devī dawns. As she is bent on breaking through the Brahma-granthi on the way to the Sahasrāra, she remains there only for a trice manifesting herself in the form of a streak of lightning. The Catuṣ-koṇa, i.e., the Bhū-gṛha of the Srī-cakra, is indicated by this. By conquering the mind, the Yogin is said to attain mystic powers, such as clairvoyance, clairaudience, telepathy, etc. The mystic-powers ascribed above, as resulting from the mastery of these Cakra-s at the various stages, are really so many pitfalls to be avoided by the practitioner, as they are likely to lead him astray from his final goal of Nirvāṇa.

These six Cakra-s are but temporary stages or planes wherein the Kuṇḍalinī rests awhile, avowedly for mastering them, while the Sahasrāra is her permanent abode, whence the practitioner should not lose sight of his final goal, Nirvāṇa, beguiled by the temptations offered by the psychic powers attainable at the lower centres, but should lead the Kuṇḍalinī on to the Sahasrāra, there to effect her union with her Lord. Up to the moment of such blending the practitioner retains his individual consciousness and thereafter enters on the blissful state of Nirvāṇa as long as the Kuṇḍalinī rests in the Sahasrāra prior to her descent therefrom. 'The duration of her stay there depends on the strength of practice and the previous experience of the practitioner. Broken through the entire path of Kula—and thus having transcended the twenty-one Tattva-s from Pṛthivī to Manas, and the six Cakra-s, which, when taken together, would form the lower Srī-cakra.

Lunar regions, and Thyself assuming the form of a serpent of three-and-a-half coils, sleepest Thou in the hollow of the Kula-kunḍa.

The previous stanza read along with this is said to contain the Kuṇḍalinī-rahasya-sopāna, i.e., the secret ladder used by the Kuṇḍalinī, both for ascent and descent. The former deals with the Unneya-bhūmikā, i.e., the ascent from the Mūlādhāra to the Sahasrāra, which has been fully set forth already. In this, the Anvaya and the Pratyāvṛtti-bhūmikā-s are briefly touched upon. By 'Anvaya' is meant the aftermath, viz., the in-filling, through the Suṣumṇā, of all the Nāḍi-s of the Samayin ; by 'Pratyāvṛtti' is meant the descent of the Kuṇḍalinī back to her hollow in the Mūlādhāra, there to resume her sleep.

In-filled—as a result of the sprinkling of nectar. The pathway of the Nāḍi-s—The original word 'Prapañca' is interpreted as the 'Nāḍi-prapañca', i.e., the system of Nāḍi-s comprising the seventy-two thousand, all of them interrelated and connected with the main Nāḍi, the Suṣumṇā, which passes through the six Cakra-s with their three Granthi-s. From Thy pair of feet—i.e., from the intermediate space between them. The nectar that flows therefrom is said to be the water that has washed the Devi's feet, which, by filling the entire body of the practitioner through the Nāḍi-s, makes him realize the Supreme Bliss. Those that hold the view that the Devī has four Carapa-s, the Śukla, the Rakta, the Miśra and the Nirvāṇa, would have the S'ukla and the Rakta as the pair of feet referred to in this stanza, for the reason that it is these two that have the Ājñā-cakra of the middle of the eyebrows as their seat. Lunar regions—The word 'Rasāmnāya-mahas', occurring in Tāntric literature, refers to the Moon, as it literally means 'endowed with splendour issuing out of the exuberance of nectar.' The word is also construed as "light revealing the six"¹ Āmnāya-s, eastern, southern, western, northern, upward and downward, embracing the Mind in the Ājñā, the ether in the Visuddhi, the Air in the An-āhata, Water in the Maṇi-pūra, Fire in the Svādhiṣṭhāna, and Earth in the Mūlādhāra." If this meaning is adopted, the reading 'Rasāmnāya-mahasā' would be appropriate, when this part of the stanza would mean 'having resumed Thine own position along with the splendour of the six Āmnāya-s, etc.' Thine own position—viz., the Mūlādhāra, which is the seat of the Kuṇḍalinī, whose form the Devī assumes in the Microcosm. Three-and-a-half coils—the word 'Adhyuṣṭa' of the original has the accepted significance of 'three-and-a-half' and does not admit of any etymological explanation. Hollow of the Kula-kunḍa—the knot-like form of the Mūlādhāra, where there is a hollow. In the case of the reading 'Kuhariṇī' (Nom. case) the meaning would be, "Thou, (the Kuṇḍalinī) who dwellest in the hollow." Here is said to abide the Kuṇḍalinī in the form of a fine lotus-fibre. Kula-kunḍa is also taken to indicate the Tri-koṇa in the pericarp of the four-petalled lotus of the Mūlā-dhāra. The Samayin-s treat the disc of the Moon in the crest, as well as the external one, as the Srī-cakra, as, in their view, the Srī-cakra of the Srī-vidyā is itself a Moon of sixteen Kalā-s.

The Kuṇḍalinī, during her ascent through the Suṣumṇā-path, breaks through the six Cakra-s, which, being absorbed by her, become invisible. As these have to be reproduced and made manifest once again, she does this, out of her own radiant form, on her return journey homeward, after sprinkling nectar over the Prapañca, which signifies the Microcosm as well as the Macrocosm, as represented by the six Cakra-s. By construing the word 'Rasāmnāya-mahas' as implying the 'Vidhāna', 'doing', and the 'Prakāśa', 'manifestation', of the Rasa-s, the lotuses, this purpose is achieved. In this view the stanza may be rendered thus: "Having sprinkled the Prapañca (composed of the twenty-one Tattva-s represented by the six Cakra-s), and again having produced and made them manifest, out of Thine own resplendent form, having resumed Thine own seat, Thyself assuming Thine own form, serpent-like with the

the three lines, turn out to be forty-three (in number).

The angles contained in what constitutes Thy mansion—i.e., the angles of the Śrī-cakra, which forms the Devi's Śarana, abode. The word 'angles' should be understood as the angles at the apex of the triangles pointing outwards in the Śrī-cakra. Others take it in the sense of 'triangles', probably with a view to avoid what they consider to be the contingency of having to reckon two more angles in taking the inmost triangle into account. There is no room, in our view, for any such contingency. In calculating the number of Koṇa-s in the Śrī-cakra, we should start with the initial triangle with which we began the design of the Śrī-cakra in Sṛṣṭi-krama, and not the inmost triangle, which was derived later on. As the angles at the base of the initial triangle form two of the corner angles of the Aṣṭa-koṇa, the angle pointing upwards alone has to be taken into account. The nine Mūla-prakṛti-s—the nine root-causes of the Śrī-cakra, i.e., the nine triangles having as their bases the nine horizontal lines drawn perpendicular to the diameter. They also signify the prime cause of Prapañca, i.e., primordial matter, and are also appropriately called the nine Yoni-s, which are said to be of the form of the nine Dhātu-s which go to make up the body of the Microcosm. The five Dhātu-s, humours : Tvac, Asṛj, Māṃsa, Medas and Asthi, originate from the Śakti; and Majjā, Śukla, Prāṇa and the Jīva of the Microcosm originate from Śiva; while the five Bhūta-s, the five Tan-mātra-s, the five Jñānendriya-s, the five Karmendriya-s and the Manas of the Macrocosm have their origin in the S'akti, and likewise Māyā, Suddha-vidyā, Mahes'vara and Sadā-s'iva are from S'iva. Thus it will be seen that the nine basic triangles, involving the twenty-five Tattva-s, stand for the entire Microcosm and Macrocosm. 'S'ri-kaṇṭha-s' and 'S'iva-yuvati-s' are the triangles so designated. Lying apart from Saṃbhu—'Saṃbhu' stands for the Bindu, which lies in the quadrilateral and therefore apart from the nine triangles. The words Vasu and Kalā in Saṃskṛt are conventional for 8 and 16, and here denote the eight-petalled and the sixteen-petalled lotus respectively. The three circles and the three lines—in drawing the S'ri-cakra some describe only one circle in the place of the three Mekhalā-s, forgetting that the two already existing circles form the pericarps of the eight-petalled and the sixteen-petalled lotus. This is against the view of the majority. The three lines—the author of the Saundarya-lahari is not apparently of the view that four doorways, one on each side, should be provided for the quadrangular Bhū-gr̥ha of three lines, as, otherwise, he would have specifically made mention of them here. Although Vāmakes'vara-tantra and some others hold the view that the Bhū-gr̥ha has four doorways, still Bhāskara-rāya, in his Setu-bandha makes mention of the fact that the Yāmala is silent¹ about the doorways and S'aṅkara-bhagavat-pāda in his Saundarya-laharī follows suit with the same view. Strangely enough, Lakṣmi-dhara, who strongly supports the view in favour of the doorways, quotes the selfsame authority in support of his view, taking care, however, to fabricate a reading of his own, convenient for his purpose. The word 'Dvāro-pānta' occurring in stanza 96 infra, however seems to lend support to Lakṣmi-dhara's view. Forty-three in number—comprising the vertical angle of the initial Tri-koṇa, the eight corner angles of the Aṣṭa-koṇa pointing outwards, the twenty corner angles of the internal and external Das'āra-s pointing outwards, and the fourteen corner angles of the Catur-das'āra pointing outwards are the forty-three Koṇas meant. The portions of the S'rī-cakra lying outside these angles are considered as merged in them, the Aṣṭa-dala-padma in the Tri-koṇa, the Ṣoḍaśa-dala in the Aṣṭa-koṇa, Mekhalā-traya in the two Das'āra-s, and the Bhū-gṛha in the Catur-das'āra respectively. Those who adopt the reading 'Catus'-catvāriṃśat' understand the word 'S'araṇa-koṇāḥ' as, "Bindu, the abode of S'iva, and the angles and give their number as forty-four."

The S'rī-cakra (containing the fifty-one letters of the Alphabet), which is the Devi's abode, inside which is the abode of Lakṣmi, is construed as of the character of Soma, Sūrya and Anala. Some hold the view that it contains the three regions of the Moon, the Sun and

Fire in the descending order, in three distinct parts, among the six Cakra-s forming part of it. . Others maintain that it partakes of the character of each of the three, offering the following explanation : The forty-three angles of the S'ri-cakra are represented by the sixteen Kalā-s of the Moon and the twenty-seven stars in its Soma aspect ; by the twelve Kalā-s, twelve Mūrti-s, twelve Ṛṣi-s, the three Veda-s and the four Svara-s in its Sūrya aspect ; and by the Tri-koṇa representing Agni, the Aṣṭa-koṇa, the eight Mūrti-s of Agni, the Antar-das'āra, the ten Kalā-s of Agni, the Bahir-das'āra, the ten Vibhūti-s of Agni, the Vis'va over which the three tongues representing the three Guna-s of Agni spread, made up of the fourteen worlds representing the Catur-das'āra in its Agni aspect. It may be pointed out in this connection that this stanza is considered by some as the Bahir-yāga, the external sacrifice of the Upāsaka-s of the Devi, while the previous two stanzas deal with the Antar-yāga, the internal sacrifice, as both of them culminate in the partaking, by the Upāsaka, of the Parāmṛta as Havya.

There are three ways in which the parts of the S'ri-cakra are viewed, as providing abodes for the deities, each one of them forming the basis of a distinct form of worship. They are known as the Meru-, the Kailāsa-, and the Bhū-prastāra-s.¹ The arrangement of the sixteen Nityā-s according to the design of the Meru-prastāra is as follows: The sixteen Nityā-s, viz., Mahā-tri-pura-sundarī, Kameśvarī, Bhaga-mālinī, Nitya-klinnā, Bherundā, Vahni-vāsinī, Mahā-vidyeshvarī, Śiva-dūtī, Tvaritā, Kula-sundarī, Nityā, Nīla-patākā, Vijayā, Sarva-maṅgalā, Jvālā-mālinikā and Cit-kalā are split into eight pairs, in the order above named. The fifty-one letters of the Alphabet are similarly divided into the following eight groups, viz., A-varga, Ka-varga, Ca-varga, Ṭa-varga, Ta-varga, Pa-varga, Ya-varga and Śa-varga. The pairs of deities along with the groups of letters are then considered as having their places over the eight petals of the Aṣṭa-dala-padma, commencing from the petal pointing to the east, clockwise. Each petal thus comes to be identified with a distinct pair of deities and a group of letters. In the same manner, commencing from the angle pointing eastwards of the Aṣṭa-koṇa, the same pairs of deities and groups of letters should be considered as inherent in each corresponding angle of the Aṣṭa-koṇa. The same Nityā-s coupled with the sixteen vowels should be identified as having their place the Bhū-prastāra has for its requisite a flat plate of gold four inches square and weighing six tolas, over which is worked out in relief the Śrī-cakra. Meru-prastāra is spoken of as of three kinds: (a) The three Cakra-s commencing from the Bhū-pura or Bhū-grha constituting the Sṛṣṭi-cakra-s, the next three constituting the Sthiti-cakra-s and the last three constituting the Saṃhāra-cakra-s are wrought in massive gold in three stages rising one above the other in the form of a pyramid; (b) the Bhū-pura as the first stage, the two lotuses as the second stage, and the six other Cakra-s as the third rising one above the other in the form of a pyramid, and (c) the nine Cakra-s rising one above the other in nine stages in the sixteen petals of the Ṣoḍaśa-dala-padma and as inherent in the Dvi-dasāra. The first two of the Nityā-s are considered to be of the form of the Tri-koṇa and the Bindu respectively ; the other fourteen Nityā-s are considered as inherent in the fourteen angles of the Catur-dasāra. This is how the Nityā-s are considered to inhere in the Srī-cakra. The arrangement of the fifty-one Mātrkā-s according to the design of the Kailāsa-prastāra is as follows : The sixteen vowels, the very life of the Alphabet, corresponding to the sixteen Nityā-s, are compressed into 'Aḥ' which is made up of the 'A' preceding the 'E' and the 'Visarga' derived from 'Sa' of the Pañca-dasākṣarī. This is assigned its place in the Baindava-sthāna and should be considered as also inhering there. The consonants, commencing from 'Ka' and ending with 'Ma', known as the 'Sparsa', with the three syllables 'Āṃ', 'Hrīm', 'Krōm' (the Pāsāṅkuśa-bīja-s), these twenty-eight should be considered as inherent in the angles of the Aṣṭa-koṇa and the two Dasāra-s, one letter in each angle, the remaining nine letters commencing from 'Ya', after duplication, should be considered as inherent in the fourteen angles of the Catur-dasā-koṇa and the four S'iva-cakra-s, one in each. This is how the Mātrkā-s are considered to inhere in the Srī-cakra. The arrangement of the deities consisting of Vaśinī and others, according to the design of the Bhū-prastāra, is as follows : The sixteen Nityā-s split into eight pairs along with one of the eight deities, viz., Vaśinī, Kameśvarī, Modinī, Vimalā, Aruṇā, Jayinī, Sarveśvarī and Kaulinī added to each pair, the eight groups of three deities each thus formed, should be considered as inherent in the eight Cakra-s lying beyond the Bindu and the Tri-koṇa, one in each. The Mahā-tripura-sundarī should be considered as inherent in the middle of the Srī-cakra; the eight Varga-s, the eight deities, Vaśinī, etc., the remaining fifteen Nityā-s and the twelve Yoginī-s, viz., Vidyā-yoginī, Recikā-yoginī, Mocikā-yoginī, Amṛtā-yoginī, Dīpikā-yoginī, Jñāna-yoginī, Āpyāyanī-yoginī, Vyāpinī-yoginī, Medhā-yoginī, Vyoma-rūpā-yoginī, Siddhi-rūpā-yoginī and Lakṣmī-yoginī, constituting forty-three in all, should be considered inherent in the forty-three angles of the Srī-cakra, one in each. In the four doorways, the four deities, viz., Gandbākarṣinī, Rasākarṣinī, Rūpākarṣinī and Sparsākarṣinī, should be considered as inherent. This is how the Vaśinī, etc., are considered to inhere in the Srī-cakra. The worship of the Srī-cakra as well as the successful accomplishment of the Yogic practice of rousing the Kuṇḍalīnī and leading it to the Sahasrāra, thence back to the Mūlādhāra, by the Ṛṣi-s of yore is borne testimony to by the *Taiṭtirīyāranya*ka, when it makes reference to the Prṣni-s (Tait. I, 27).

O Daughter of the snow-capped Mountain!
The foremost poets, such as Viriñci and others, are baulked in their attempt to find a match for Thy beauty, as (even) celestial damsels, in their eagerness to appreciate which, mentally attain at-one-ment with Giri-s'a, which is hard to attain even by severe penance.

In this stanza the author extols, though indirectly, the Sāyujya, the state of at-one-ment brought about by the merger of Śiva and the Śakti, the presiding deity of the Ānanda-laharī, after describing her abode, the Śrī-cakra, in the previous one.

The foremost poets—those that indulge in portraiture of the sublime and the beautiful, out of the flights of their fancy, with the aid of rhetorical devices. Brahman is here spoken of as one of the foremost poets, in fact the foremost among them, for the reason that he is the author of the most beautiful among created things, and any attempt made by a poet in this direction could but be a poor imitation of Brahman's artistic skill. Further the Veda-s, which afford the sublimest examples of poesy, owe their origin to him. Baulked—because they do not command that power of mental analysis and expression which would enable them to draw a picture of the Devī's beauty, at least in terms of equally beautiful objects. Their only possible resource in this respect would be the celestial nymphs. But these in their own estimate fall so far short of the Devī that, in their eagerness to have a look at her, they always think of Śiva, who alone has the privilege of enjoying the Devī's beauty at close quarters, and in their emulation become one with him. . In the case of the reading 'Yad ālokya '—having seen which, 'Manasā'—with the mind, the meaning would be 'having meditated upon Thy beauty'. The celestial nymphs, by the sheer strength of such Dhyāna-yoga, attain that one-ness with Śiva, which is denied even to the greatest of sages, notwithstanding their severe austerities. There is another reading 'Paśūnām' for 'Tapobhīḥ'—meaning 'by those who are Paśu-s' (animals), in that they do not follow the Tantra-s.

Damsels in hundreds, with their locks dishevelled, their sarees flying off their figures, their girdles bursting asunder with force, their silk garments slipping down, run after a decrepit, ugly and impotent man, who falls within the range of Thy side-glances.

This stanza may be characterized as one wherein the poet's fancy has run riot, in extolling the potency of the Devī's side-glances. If any description, in the true classic style, of women unhinged by the influence of passion is to be attempted by the saintliest of poets, it is to be met with in this stanza.

Run after—madly follow in the wake of, in the belief that he is Madana incarnate. To the exquisitely beautiful side-glances of the Devī is attributed the virtue of converting even the most repulsive into the most attractive in this stanza, and the same feature is dwelt upon further in the eighteenth and nineteenth stanzas infra, the motif in all the three cases being to raise Kāma, the satisfaction of desire and passions, to the rank of one of the four Puruṣārtha-s, the ends and aims of human existence. This is what is known as the Mādana-prayoga.

Thy pair of lotus-like feet is far above those rays, viz., the fifty-six (rays) of (the Mulādhāra, of the character of) Earth, the fifty-two of (the Mani-pūra, of the character of) Water, the sixty-two of (the Svādhiṣṭhāna of the character of) Fire, the fifty-four of (the An-āhata, of the character of) Air, the seventy-two of (the Viśuddhi, of the character of) Ether, and the sixty-four of (the Ājñā, of the character of) the Mind.

In this stanza the exalted nature of the Devī's pair of feet, resting on the Sahasrāra, is described in detail, with reference to the six Cakra-s below the Sahasrāra. The Mayūkha-s referred to in this stanza may be understood from four different points of view. (1) They are rays effulging from Agni, Sūrya and Soma, having as their position the Rudra-, Viṣṇu- and Brahma-granthi-s, over contiguous pairs of the six Cakra-s in the ascending order, their number being three hundred and sixty in all. (2) They indicate the lunar year of 360 Tithi-s, each Tithi representing a digit of the Moon, with the six seasons, Vasanta, Grīṣma, Varṣa, Śarad, Hemanta and Siś'ira, corresponding to the six Cakra-s, and the Devī's feet standing above them all as Nāda and Bindu, being Kālā-go-cara (transcending all time). (3) The Mayūkha-s may be taken to indicate the several Tattva-s represented by the elements corresponding to the Cakra-s, in two sets, so that one set may be ascribed to the S'akti and the other to S'iva, the Devī's feet being Tattvātīta and therefore transcending them all. (4) The Mayūkha-s may also be construed as the Mātrkā-s or letters of the Alphabet grouped as follows: 1. The fifty letters of the Alphabet, 'Kṣa' being left out of account, and the Bīja-s 'Aim', 'Hrīm', 'S'rīm', 'Aim', 'Klīm' and 'Sauḥ', indicative of Earth. 2. The fifty letters as above and the Bīja-s 'Saum' and 'S'rīm', of Water. 3. The fifty letters, the fourteenth letter repeated four times, the Bīja-s 'Ham' and 'Saḥ' repeated four times, of Fire. 4. The fifty letters and 'Yaṃ', 'Raṃ', 'Laṃ' and 'Vaṃ', of Air. 5. The first fourteen vowels repeated five times and the Bīja-s 'Aim' and 'Hrīm', of Ether. 6. The sixteen vowels repeated four times, of the Manas. It is said that with the three hundred and sixty syllables thus arrived at, together with 'Ham' and 'Saḥ', the requisite Nyāsa should be performed in the six Cakra-s. (Vide Introduction to Serpent-Power, by Arthur Avalon.)

According to the first of these views each ray is given a distinct Āvarana-devatā of its own. In this classification are involved two kinds of Tantra-s, the Pūrva and the Uttara, the first pertaining to the S'akti and hence known as S'ākta and the second pertaining to S'iva and styled Sāmbhava. From the conjunction of the non-differentiated All-Witness, Ś'iva with the Ś'akti for the creation of the world, there effulges a radiance, known as Parā, pervading from the Brahma-randhra to the Ājñā in the middle of the eyebrows. This is known as the deity presiding over the humour Majjā—marrow. By her are generated the five deities known as Icchā, Jñāna, Kriyā, Kuṇḍalinī and Māṭṛkā, manifesting themselves respectively in the Visuddhi of the throat, typifying Ether, in the An-āhata of the heart, typifying Air, in the Maṇi-pūra of the navel, typifying Water, in the Svādhiṣṭhāna of the genitals, typifying Fire, and in the Mūlādhāra of the region above the anus, typifying Earth, presiding over Tvac, Asrj, Māṃsa, Medas and Asthi and making up the entire, creation, animate and inanimate. The number of rays pertaining to Agni and manifesting in the Mūlādhāra and the Maṇi-pūra enveloping the first Khaṇḍa is 108. The number of rays of the Sun manifesting in the Svādhiṣṭhāna and the An-āhata and enveloping the second Khaṇḍa is 116¹. The number of rays of the Moon manifesting in the

Viśuddhi and the Ājñā and enveloping the third Khaṇḍa is 136. It has to be observed that the Moon of this region with its fifteen waxing and waning Kalā-s is but a reflection of the full Moon with perpetual Kalā-s which has its place in the middle of the Sahasrāra. Kaivalyās'rama gives the names of the 360 deities presiding over the Mayūkha-s in the order of the groups given in this stanza. These names are mentioned in the footnote under stanzas 36-41.

These rays are also looked upon as representing the Eternal Verities in the following manner :

The five Tan-mātra-s, the five elements, the ten organs of perception and motor action, the four Antaḥ-karana-s, Kalā, Prakṛti, Puruṣa and Mahat, twenty-eight in all, duplicated so as to represent the S'akti and S'iva, yield fifty-six as pertaining to Earth. The five elements, the ten organs of perception and motor action, their ten distinctive functions and Manas, twenty-six in all, duplicated as above, yield fifty-two as of Water. The five elements, the five Tan-mātra-s, the ten organs of perception and motor action, their ten distinctive functions and Manas, thirty-one in all, duplicated as above, yield sixty-two as of Agni. The twenty-eight Tattva-s of Earth, excluding Mahat therefrom, i.e., the twenty-seven so obtained, when duplicated as above, yield fifty-four as of Vāyu. The thirty-six Tattva-s of the Kalpa-sūtra-s (vide note under stanza 9) duplicated as above yield seventy-two as of Ether. The same Tattva-s excluding the last four, i.e., thirty-two, when duplicated, yield sixty-four as of the Manas. These rays are generated in the first instance from the Devī's feet and are thence derived by the Moon, the Sun and Fire, who worship at her feet, for the evolution of the world. The special qualities possessed by these rays are described in detail in Bhairava-yāmala. The Śrī-vidyā is otherwise known as the Candra-kalā-vidyā or the lore relating to the waxing and waning of the fifteen Kalā-s, represented by the fifteen Tithi-s of the Pūrva- and Aparapakṣa-s, which form the basis of calculating duration. The year, which is thus one aspect of the manifestation of the Kāla-saktr, is said to be Prajā-pati, the creator. Hence these rays are verily the cause of the creation, sustenance and dissolution of the universe, the Microcosm as well as the Macrocosm. As there are myriads of such Microcosms and Macrocosms affected by the Sun, the Moon and Fire, through whom are diffused these rays which originate from the Devī's feet, the Mayūkha-s referred to are not merely three hundred and sixty, but infinite. It also follows that the Baindava-sthāna of the Candra-kalā-cakra, wherein the Devī reigns supreme and wherefrom these rays originate and manifest themselves, transcends all worlds for all time.

Even as the miraculous effect of the Devī's side-glance has been adverted to in the thirteenth stanza, the marvellous powers inherent in approaching the Devī with the right kind of meditation and prayer are expounded in this and the six accompanying stanzas.

In this stanza is described the greatness of meditation of the Sāttvika type on the Devī's form, through the Vāg-bhava-kūṭa of the Pañca-das'ākṣari. To Thee—the Devī in the form of the Vāg-bhava-kūṭa. Bowing even once to the Devī is credited with making the Upāsaka a great poet and attain all knowledge. The Devī is said to be in the form of Kriyā-s'akti, when meditated upon as the source of poetic talents. This stanza and the next two are spoken of as referring to the Sārasvata-prayoga.

Such rare, high-souled men, who worship Thee as Aruṇā, radiant as the morning sunlight, (causing) the lotus-like minds of great poets (to bloom), delight (the assembly of) wise men, with their diction, profound like the fresh flood of erotic sentiments flowing from Viriñci's beloved spouse.

The gift of poesy, as the result of exclusive worship of the Devī as Aruṇā in the heart of the votary, is indicated in this stanza. The greatness of meditation of the Rājasic type on the Devī's form, through the Vāg-bhava-kūṭa, is indicated in this stanza. Some are of opinion that, for the reason that there is reference in this stanza to erotic sentiment, the Deva as Icchā-s'akti presiding over the Kāma-rāja-kūṭa is indicated in this stanza. Minds—i.e., hearts. Poets, who meditate on the Devī as Aruṇā in their heart-lotuses, become, as a result of the Devī's grace, so many Sarasvatī-s for the nonce, and with the choice diction and command of erotic sentiments, characteristic only of the Goddess of Learning, delight the assembly of wise men ; in other words, the Devī has the power of converting her votaries into as many Sarasvatī-s.

Kāvya-s, replete with words erudite in style and sweet with the fragrance of the lotus-like mouth of the Goddess of Learning.

The Upāsanā of the Devi in the form of Arunā was credited, in the previous stanza, with the bestowal of the gift of fluency. In this stanza persistence in the same meditation, but of the Sāttvika type, is said to turn the votary into a reputed author of epic poems.

Generators of speech, Vasinī and others—the eight deities, Vasinī and others of the Sarvā-ro-ga-harā-cakra, whose names and relationship with the Sṛī-cakra have been dealt with under stanza 11. They are said to preside over the eight groups of the letters of the Alphabet, A-, Ka-, Ca-, Ṭa-, Ta-, Pa-, Ya-, and Śa-varga-s. They are, according to the Āgama-s, of the colour of bright crystal. Their respective seats have been already noted in explaining the Bhū-prastāra. The twelve Yoginī-s and the four guardians of the doorways of the Bhū-grha are also implied by 'Vasinī and others'. Some say that the vowels are of crystal white colour, the letters Ka to Ma of the colour of coral, the nine letters from Ya, yellow, and Kṣa, red. Others hold that the vowels are of the colour of smoke, letters from Ka to Ṭha of vermilion, from Ḍa to Pha white, from Ba to La which includes La scarlet, from Va to Sa of the colour of gold, and Ha and Kṣa of the colour of lightning. Lakṣmī-dhara holds that the latter is the view held by the author. This verse is said to refer to the fruit of meditation on the Devī in the form of the Jñāna-s'akti presiding over the S'akti-kūṭa.

body, forming, as it were, the abodes of the splendour of the rising Sun.

This stanza deals with the power bestowed by meditation on the Devī presiding over the Kāma-rājakūṭa in the form of Icchā-s'akti. With shy eyes of the timid deer—the deer express their shyness and timidity with their tremulous eyes. Urvas'ī and other celestial damsels, whose eyes are naturally steady and unwinking, because of their celestial birth, are so much filled with passion at the sight of the votary, that even their unwinking eyes betray restlessness, all on account of the Devī's grace. Graces—graceful features. The abodes of splendour—wherein the splendour abides.

O Queen of Hara ! It is but a trifle that one who contemplates Thy Manmatha-kalā, taking the Bindu to be the face, what is thereunder to be the breasts, and still underneath to be one half of Hara (i.e., a triangle), at once fascinates women (in general) ; (what is more) he very soon causes even Tri-lokī (the three worlds together) who has the Sun and the Moon as her breasts, to swirl.

This stanza, like the previous one, also affords an example of the Mādana-prayoga and deals with the fruit of meditation on the Devī, as Icchā-s'akti presiding over the Kāma-rāja-kūṭa, in virtue of which the votary acquires the power of fascinating women. Queen of Hara—i.e., the Devī of the form of Sac-cid-ānanda, being the spouse of Hara, the Paramātman, who absorbs the entire universe unto Himself. This is also construed as the Tri-koṇa, which is the resort of the Bindu in the form of Hara. Thy Manmatha-kalā—the Kāma-kalā indicating Thee, i.e., (1) 'Klīm', which, according to the Deva-nāgarī script, is made up of one Bindu at the top, two Bindu-like curves on either side of the 'K' thereunder and what is thereunder, viz., the 'L'. (2) Bereft of the 'K' and 'L', this Bīja becomes the Gupta-mahā-sārasvata-bija, viz., 'Īṃ' which is made up of three Bindu-s, one above and two thereunder, the former indicating the Sun and the latter Fire and the Moon thereunder. (3) Which is of the form of 'E' i.e., the Yoni, and (4) which is power in the form of the three Guṇa-s, i.e., the Universe which is the product of the union of Śiva and the S'akti. Taking—i.e., conceiving by the strength of meditation. One half of Hara—there is also another reading, 'Hakārārdham', meaning 'one half of Hakāra,' which is the same as Hara. 'Hakarārdha' is capable of being construed in the following ways. (1) The upper half of 'Ha' being neglected, the lower half, which resembles 'E', is construed as the Yoni. (2) 'Ha' is S'iva and one half of S'iva will be S'ivā, made up of S', I, V and Ā; eliding the consonants S' and V, the other half 'I' and 'Ā', when combined, yields 'E', which is the Yoni. (3) 'Ha' stands for 'Ravi' and when half of it, viz., the consonants 'R' and 'V' are elided, the resultant 'A' and 'I', when combined, yield 'E', the Yoni. According to S'ri-krama, the three Bindu-s are: the first or Fire, indicating Rajas and presided over by Brahman, is the face, the second and third Bindu-s, which are the Sun and the Moon, indicating Sattva and Tamas, presided over by Hari and Rudra, are the breasts. Below that, a subtle Cit-kalā, which is one half of 'Ha' with the upper half neglected, and transcends all the three Guṇa-s, is the Yoni, i.e., the triangle connecting the three Bindu-s, indicating the three Guṇa-s, the characteristics of Brahman, Hari and Rudra. (4) 'Ha' is the 'Hamsaḥ' and the one half of it, viz., the consonants 'H' and 'S' being elided, the other half, 'Aṃ' and 'Aḥ', yield three Bindu-s, which should be meditated upon as the Manmatha-kalā, viz., 'E', the Yoni. (5) Harārdham—one half of Hara, i.e., the Śakti, which means the Yoni. Besides these there is also an esoteric significance, which should be received out of the mouth of the Guru. While the first half of the stanza extols the influence of the Devi on the votary with reference to women in general, the second half deals with the extraordinary influence which, through her grace, her votary has over the three worlds personified as the woman par excellence, and in virtue of which he becomes the lord of the three worlds, within the three Śakti-s in harmony with his wishes.

According to the Rudra-yāmala, the Tri-lokī is said to assume the form of the Kāma-rāja-kalā with the Sun and the Moon as her breasts. To swirl — by the extraordinary powers he commands as the true devotee of the Devī in the form of Icchā-śakti. Some hold the view that this verse speaks of Pañca-ma-yāga, esoterically, the union of the Kuṇḍalinī with Parama-śiva and of Maithuna on the material plane.

He who contemplates Thee in his heart, who diffusest nectar in the form of beams from (Thy) limbs, as an image carved out of a moon-stone, quells the pride of serpents, like the king of birds, and cures those afflicted with fever, with a look resembling the nectar-showering Nāḍi.

Thee—who hast assumed the form of Amṛtes'varī.

Quells the pride of serpents—at the very sight of the votary serpents are said to seek safe places of retreat, as, in virtue of the power acquired by him from meditation on the Devī, he appears to their eyes as Garutmat, the king of birds and the traditional vanquisher of serpents. The votary is thus indirectly an antidote to snake-bite. By 'fever' is meant any chronic disease, such as malaria, which afflicts mankind in general. Diseases are cured by the ordinary medical practitioner with the administration of drugs. But the votary of the Devī, through her grace, is endowed with the miraculous power of healing the afflicted by the mere casting of a look. Resembling the nectar-showering Nāḍī—the Nāḍī referred to is the Amṛta-nāḍī recognized by the Yogin-s, which, in filling the entire system of Nāḍī-s with nectar, fills the accomplished Yogin with the ecstasy of Bliss. This stanza refers to the special powers acquired by the Yogin, from worship of the Devī, wherewith even death could be conquered.

slender as a streak of lightning, of the essence of the Sun, the Moon and Fire, and abiding in the great forest of lotuses, standing far above even the six lotusès, derive a flood of infinite Bliss.

Bereft of impurity and illusion—with impurities such as carnal desire, volition, assumption, etc., which are the result of illusion, completely attenuated. Thy Kalā—the Kalā known as Parā of the Devī in the form of Candra-kalā. This form is assumed by the Devī in the Bāndava-sthāna of the Sahasrāra, when she is conjoined with S'iva. Streak of lightning—in the Ājñā-cakra and thereafter. Essence of the Sun, etc.—as without the Devī, the Sun, etc., cannot exist. It may also be noted that the Sun, the Moon and Fire derive their luminosity, etc., only through the Devī's grace. Great forest of lotuses—the thousand-petalled lotus in the Dvā-das'ānta is meant by this. In the case of the reading 'Mṛdu-tamam', the meaning would be 'without effort'. The meditation on the Kāma-kalā in the form of the Tri-pura-sundarī, the mother of Brahman, Viṣṇu and Rudra, referred to in stanza 19, is said to be the Bāhya, or outer meditation. Stanza 21 is said to formulate the Ābhyantara, or inner meditation on the pure Cit-svarūpa of the Devī, attainable only by the great. This form is very subtle, while the forms referred to previously are intended for votaries of lower capacities.

Meditation on the Devī along with the Mantra should be confined to the following eighteen seats of the Liṅga-s'arira: the Kula-padma, i.e., the Sahasrāra opening upwards from its place a little below the Mūlādhāra, the Viṣṇu, one of the two lotuses of eight and six petals respectively between the Kula-padma and the Mūlādhāra, the Mūlādhāra, the Maṇi-pūra, the Svādhiṣṭhāna, the An-āhata, the Viśuddhi, the Lambikāgra, the Ājñā, the Indu, the Ardha-candra, the Rodhinī, the Nāda, the Nādānta, the Sakti, the Vyāpikā, the Sa-manā and the Un-manā. The fifteen syllables of the Pañca-dasākṣari should be conceived as inherent in the first fifteen of these seats from below, one in each, and also every prior one of the fifteen syllables should be conceived as being dissolved in the immediately succeeding one, in order, the last of the fifteen being dissolved in the fire of the form of Yoni in the Vyāpikā, the Yoni conceived as in Īśvara of the form of the three Bindu-s, Sūrya, Agni and Soma, and dissolved, the Sūrya in the Agni, the Agni in the Soma, in the Sa-manā, and the Soma in the Sa-parārdha-kalā of the Un-manā. When all are dissolved, the Yogin, conceiving of the conjoint S'iva and the S'akti as his own Self, attains one-ness with the S'adā-s'iva-tattva and becomes a Jīvan-mukta.

When one, desirous of earnestly beseeching Thee with the words, "O Bhavānī! mayest Thou cast Thy merciful glance on me, Thy slave", pronounces the words, "Bhavāni tvam", (may I be Thou), that very moment, Thou bestowest on him the status identically Thine own, rendered lustrous by the brilliant crowns worn by Mukunda, Brahman and Indra.

This stanza extols, by implication, the worship of the Devī, with the conception, by the worshipper, of his identity with her, in preference to the other forms of worship, such as by the performance of Japa, Homa, etc., as it is held, that the mere utterance of words, conveying the idea of the Mahā-vākya-s, such as 'Tat tvam asi' etc., either intentionally or by accident, carries with it the full fruits attainable by the realization of their contents. The author of this work, after dealing with the Antar-yāga and Bahir-yāga methods of approach in the previous stanzas, deals with the potency of Bhakti or devotion in this stanza. Bhakti is held by a school of thought as leading to liberation in the form of Sā-lokya, reaching the abode of the Supreme Being, Sāmīpya, proximity to the Supreme Being,

Sā-rūpya, becoming of the form of the Supreme Being, and Sā-yujya, At-one-ment with the Supreme Being. The liberation referred to here is Sā-yujya. Rendered lustrous—the implication is that Mukunda, Brahman and Indra hold the status referred to above in such high esteem, and so venerate it, as to perform Nīrājana (the waving of lights), as it were, before it, with their dazzling bright crowns serving the purposes of lights in the ceremony.

with Thy mind, not satisfied with having absorbed the left one; for, this, Thy form, is entirely of a red colour, has three eyes, is slightly bent with (the weight of) the breasts, and wears over its crown the Crescent-moon:

The theme of this stanza, as of several others, is the complete union of S'iva with the S'akti. But the author accomplishes this purpose adroitly enough, by making use of the hermaphrodite form of Ardha-nārīś'vara, in which Śiva is worshipped, wherein he occupies the right half, and Umā, his spouse, the left half. The distinct characteristics of Śiva are a pale-white colour, a crown with the crescent on and the three eyes. The Śakti is represented to have such a mastery over Śiva that, in the first instance, she gradually encroaches on his form and annexes one half of it, viz., the left, wherein her characteristics, viz., the colour of the rising Sun and her left breast replace Śiva's, while the third eye and the crown with the crescent on are shared in common. Not satisfied with this achievement of hers, she further encroaches on the right half of Śambhu's form as well, and, having absorbed his entire form by eclipsing his colour and developing another breast, assumes the female-form, so well depicted in this stanza, thus showing beyond doubt that she has become more than one half of her Lord. This stanza may also be taken to support, by implication, the well-known doctrine of the Uttara-kaula-s, for whom there is no Śiva-tattva apart from the Śakti-tattva, as the former stands absorbed in the latter.

This stanza implies that those who worship the Devī stand in no need of separately worshipping Brahma, Viṣṇu and Rudra, who are but her agents, standing by her foot-stool, ever at her beck and call and in the act of adoring her.

After descanting on the greatness of the Devī and the miraculous powers acquired by her votaries, as a result of meditating on her form with the appropriate Cakra's, the author, in this stanza, deals with the manner in which a typical Jīvan-mukta would worship the Devī, as prescribed in the Bhāvanopaniṣad. The worship of the Devī is of a two-fold character, viz., exoteric (the lower form) and esoteric (the higher form). The former contains all the elements of prayer, gesture, circumambulation, oblation and prostration, as practised by the ordinary worshipper. The latter, which does not attach any importance to ceremonial forms, is referred to here as practised by the ever-hallowed Jivan-mukta-s. The author so thoroughly identifies himself with this method, that he uses the words 'of mine' significantly enough. Prattle—being made up of the Mātrkā-s, which are divine, turns out to be prayer of some form, either mental or muttered or recited aloud. Mudrā-s—such as are used at the invocation of a deity and other connected rituals, which take the form of manual gestures. Nourishment—various kinds of solid and liquid food. This is considered as offering oblations to the Devī in the form of the Jāṭharāgni, vital energy in the belly. Lying down—includes sleep, turning one's limbs while in bed, etc. Lakṣmī-dhara is of opinion that the worship of the Devī as the Sādākhyā-tattva in the Sahasrāra, and not the external kind, wherein the Devī is mounted on a pedestal, etc., is meant by this stanza. Though Samayin-s have nothing to do with external forms, still there is a class of Samayin-s who resort to the worship of the Devī in the middle of the solar disc, with Pāś'a, Aṅkus'a, etc. in her arms, based on the authority of the Candra-jñāna-vidyā. This stanza contains the essence of the practice of Jñāna-yoga, wherein all action is dedicated to the Paramātmā here represented by the Tri-pura-sundarī. In this sense every natural act and function without exception should be construed as an act of worship of the Devī.

O Mother ! all the denizens of the celestial regions, such as Vidhi, S'ata-makha and others, perish even after drinking nectar, which is reputed to confer immunity from terrible old age and death. If the period of life of S'ambhu, who has swallowed virulent poison, is beyond computation, it is all due to the peculiar virtue of Thy Tāṭaṅka-s (ear-ornaments).

Having given some indication of the fruits attainable by a votary through Bhakti, devotion to the Devī, the author sets about, in this stanza, describing the marvellous powers exercised by the Devī's Tāṭaṅka-s, through which alone eternal prosperity is vouchsafed to her devotees. Immunity from terrible old age and death—the apparent incongruity involved in conceiving of Brahma, Indra and other gods as perishing, in spite of their having drunk nectar, will vanish, if we take into account the fact that even the Deva-s meet with their dissolution at the time of the great deluge. Peculiar virtue of Thy Tāṭaṅka-s—the word 'Tāṭaṅka' is understood by some as the Māṅgalya-sūtra, which it is the privilege of all Sumaṅgalī-s, i.e., women with their husbands alive, to wear around their necks. But the correct view is that the Tāṭaṅka-s are ear-ornaments which are the outward symbols of Sumaṅgalī-s, who are enjoined not to forsake their Tāṭaṅka-s by any means, as their doing so would amount to their assuming the outward symbol of widowhood. In this view, the Devī's Tāṭaṅka-s would lose their hold on her ears, only when Śaṃbhu could be overtaken by catastrophe, a contingency which is impossible, as the Devī's Tāṭaṅka-s, whereon the very origin, duration and end of Kāla, i.e., Time, depends. It is on this account that even the most virulent poison, which Śaṃbhu drank, had apparently no effect on him. So wonderful is the influence of the Devī on the longevity of her husband's life!

Glory to the words (of caution) of Thy servants: "Pray avoid the crown of Viriñci (lying) afore Thee!" "You will topple over the hard crest of the slayer of Kaiṭabha!" "Please keep off from the head-gear of the foe of Jambha!"—while all these three lay prostrate before Thee,—when, all of a sudden, Thou startedst to receive Bhava, who had come to Thy abode!

Here is a touchingly graphic description of the reception accorded to her Lord by the Devī, while holding her court, surrounded by her maids-in-waiting and with the prostrate forms of Brahma, Hari and Indra supplicating afore her, the maids administering here a timely warning, lest she should stumble on the crowns of the supplicating gods, in the warmth of her reception." Keep off from the head-gear of the foe of Jambha—the Samskrit verbal form 'Jahi' is here used in the sense of ‘Jahihi’, (from the root ‘Hā’, ‘to abandon’) and should not be construed as the Imperative second person singular of ‘Han’, ‘to kill’, which would land us in an absurdity. To avoid this the reading ‘Jahihīndrasya makuṭam’ may as well be suggested, but this would detract from the grandeur of the original.

(O Goddess) who art eternal and art served all around by the rays, Aṇimā and others emanating from Thine own frame! What is there to wonder at, if the Fire of the great Deluge should perform the ritual of waving lights before whosoever always conceives Thee as 'I am (Thou)', treating the wealth of Tri-nayana as mere straw?

Eternal—that has neither beginning, nor end. Rays emanating from Thine own frame, i.e., the Sri-cakra of nine parts, in the form of Āvarana-devatā-s as detailed below: The three quadrangles of the Bhūgṛha, where-in abide the eight

Siddhi-s—Aṇimā, Laghimā, Mahimā, Vas'itvā, Īsatvā, Prākāmyā, Prāpti and Sarva-kāma-pradāyini, in the first quadrangle; the eight Mātr̥-s—Brāhmī, Māheśvarī, Kaumārī, Vaiṣṇavī, Vārāhī, Māhendrī, Cāmundā and Mahā-lakṣmī, in the second quadrangle; the ten Mudrā-s—Sarva-saṃkṣobhinī, Sarva-vidrāvinī, Sarvākārṣiṇī, Sarva-vaśaṃ-karī, Sarvonmādinī, Sarva-mahāṅkus'ā, Sarva-khe-carī, Sarva-bijā, Sarva-yonī and Sarva-tri-khaṇḍā, in the third quadrangle ; the sixteen Devatā-s—Kāmākaraṣiṇī, Buddhy-ākaraṣiṇī, Ahaṁ-kārākaraṣiṇī, Śabdākaraṣiṇī, Sparsākaraṣiṇī, Rūpākaraṣiṇī, Rasākaraṣiṇī, Gandhākaraṣiṇī, Cittākaraṣiṇī, Dhairyākaraṣiṇī, Smṛty-ākaraṣiṇī, Nāmākaraṣiṇī, Bijākaraṣiṇī, Ātmākaraṣiṇī, Amṛtākaraṣiṇī and Śarīrākaraṣiṇī, in the sixteen-petalled lotus ; the eight Devatā-s—Anaṅga-kusumā, Anaṅga-mekhalā, Anaṅga-madanā, Anaṅga-madanāturā, Anaṅga-rekhā, Anaṅga-veginī, Anaṅgāṅkusā and Anaṅga-mālinī, in the eight-petalled lotus : the fourteen Devatā-s—Sarva-saṁkṣobhinī, Sarva-vidrāviṇī, Sarvākaraṣiṇī, Sarvāhlādinī, Sarva-saṁmohanī, Sarva-stambhinī, Sarva-jṛmbhinī, Sarva-vaśaṁ-karī, Sarva-rañjanī, Sarva-nādinī, Sarvārtha-sādhani, Sarva-saṁpatti-pūraṇī, Sarva-mantra-mayī and Sarva-dvandva-kṣayaṁ-karī, in the Catur-dasāra ; the ten Devatā-s—Sarva-siddhi-prada, Sarva-saṁpat-pradā, Sarva-priyaṁ-karī, Sarva-maṅgala-kāriṇī, Sarva-kāma-pradā, Sarva-saubhāgya-dāyini, Sarva-mṛtyu-prasāmanī, Sarva-vighna-nivāriṇī, Sarvāṅga-sundarī and Sarva-duḥkha-vimocanī, in the Bahir-dasāra, the ten Devatā-s—Sarva-jñā, Sarva-śakti, Sarvaśvarya-pradā, Sarva-jñāna-mayī, Sarva-vyādhi-vināśanī, Sarvādhāra-sva-rūpā, Sarva-pāpa-harā, Sarvānanda-mayī, Sarva-rakṣā-sva-rūpiṇī and Sarvepsita-phala-pradā, in the Antar-dasāra ; the eight Devatā-s—Vaśinī, Kāmeśī, Modinī, Vimalā, Arunā, Jayinī, Sarveśī and Kaulinī, in the Aṣṭa-koṇa ; the three Devatā-s—Kāmeśvarī, Vajreśī and Bhaga-mālā, in the Tri-koṇa ; and the Tri-pura-sundarī in the middle. 'Frame' is also taken by some to indicate the feet, the Mayūkha-s sent out by which have been dealt with in stanza 14. This stanza represents the Yogin, who has attained one-ness with the Devī, as looking upon the untold wealth of Sadā-s'iva as a mere trifle, there being nothing else worthy of acquisition.

Pas'u-pati, having deluded all the worlds with the sixty-four Tantra-s, which have as their sole purpose the conferring of the several Siddhi-s attributed to each, has once again brought down to this world, on account of Thy persuasion, Thy Tantra, which, of its own accord, would bring about the several ends and aims of human existence.

Having deluded—into accepting the Siddhi-s, which stand far apart from the scripturally ordained path, and thus deceived them, they being incapable of distinguishing the spurious from the genuine. In this connection it may be observed that the so-called delusion, referred to above, is not the work of Paśu-pati, but is of the people's own making. According to Paśu-pati's design the Candra-kalā-vidyā comprised in the eight works, Candra-kalā, Jyotiṣ-matī, Kalā-nidhi, Kulārṇava, Kuleś-varī, Bhuvaneśvarī, Bārhas-patya and Durvāsa-mata, is meant for the exposition of the S'rī-vidyā to be followed by the twice-born by adopting the Savya (right) path, constituting the Samayācāra, and by other classes by adopting the Apa-savya (left) path, constituting the Vāmācāra, otherwise known as Kulācāra. As the Vidyā comprehends both the paths referred to above, it is also known as the Miśra or mixed path. Further, according to Paśu-pati's design, there are the sixty-four Tantra-s, which are intended exclusively for the Kaula-s. As such, it will be seen that no sort of differentiation between the various classes is aimed at in his design.¹ On the other hand, the difference is inherent in the classes themselves, due to difference of birth, which means breeding, mental equipment attained, and other consequential features. Paśu-pati, in his supreme mercy, has ordained the two paths, the one more advanced and the other less, to suit the varying capacities of all classes. The sixty-four Tantra-s, if at all they prove defective, make no difference between the classes, as even wise men are as much subject to be drawn away by the worldly purposes attributed to the Tantra-s, to the exclusion of the attainment of the scriptural goal. All the worlds—Lakṣmī-dhara and Kāmeśvara-sūri take these words to indicate the low-born and the hybrid class, known as Anu-loman and Prati-loman, with an admixture of aboriginal blood running in their veins, who are considered by them to be beyond the pale of the scriptural path, as, according to them, this path could be adopted only by the twice-born classes, because of their supposed high birth. Kaivalyāsrama adopts the reading, 'Abhisamdhāya', which means 'having attracted', along with 'Praśabha-para-tantraiḥ', which means 'categorically asserting', and would construe the passage in some such way as follows: Paśu-pati, having attracted the people of the world to achieve one or other of the four aims of human existence, through the sixty-four Tantra-s, categorically asserting the several Siddhi-s attributed to each, has, at the persuasion of the Devī, brought down into this world a single Tantra, which would, by itself, enable them to achieve their several ends, thus incorporating the purposes served by the sixty-four Tantra-s.

With the sixty-four Tantra-s—the sixty-four Tantra-s are : (1) Mahā-māyā-sambara—having as its aim the deluding of the senses and the intellect. (2) Yoginī-jāla-sambara—legerdemain, involving the agency of Yoginī-s, accomplished by resorting to the crematory and other ways of a repulsive nature and adopting questionable practices. (3) Tattva-sambara—by causing the elements to appear as though mutually transforming themselves. (4) Siddha-bhairava, (5) Vaṭuka-bhairava, (6) Kaṅkāla-bhairava, (7) Kāla-bhairava, (8) Kālāgni-bhairava, (9) Yoginī-bhairava, (10) Mahā-bhairava, (11) Sakti-bhairava—the eight Tantra-s having as their presiding deities the eight-fold aspects of Bhairava, which, although apparently serving some useful purpose to man, such as the finding of a treasure-trove, etc., are considered objectionable, as they partake of Kāpālīka doctrines. (12) Brāhmī, (13) Māheśvarī, (14) Kaumārī, (5) Vaiṣṇavī, (16) Vārāhī, (17) Māhendrī, (18) Cāmuṇḍā, (19) Sīva-dūtī—the eight Tantra-s constituting the Bahu-rūpāṣṭaka, wherein importance is attached to the eight S'akti-s. Even these are reprehensible, as they stray far away from the Vedic path, although they involve some knowledge of the S'rī-vidyā incidentally, (20) Brahma-yāmala, (21) Viṣṇu-yāmala, (22) Rudra-yāmala, (23) Lakṣmī-yāmala, (24) Umā-yāmala, (25) Śkanda-yāmala, (26) Gaṇeśa-yāmala, (27) Jayadratha-yāmala—the eight arts relating to Yamalā, otherwise known as Kāma-siddhā, aiming at the gratification of several desires, which, not having the sanction of the Veda-s, are considered objectionable, so much so that even the sixty-four Tantra-s are sometimes spoken of collectively as Yāmala. (28) Candra-jñāna—which expounds the sixteen Nityā-s and is however considered objectionable, as smacking of Kāpālīka tenents. There is also a Tantra of the same name, which has nothing to do with any of the sixty-four Tantra-s herein mentioned. (29) Mālinī-vidyā—wherewith oceans could be crossed. (30) Mahā-sammohana—which brings on sleep in persons even during their waking state. As this involves the cutting of the tongue of a child to render the acquisition of such power possible, it is reprehensible. (31) Vāma-juṣṭa, (32) Mahā-deva—productive of awkward habits and tendencies, which may be characterized as Vāmācāra, filthy conduct. (33) Vātula, (34) Vātulottara, (35) Kāmika—incidentally expounding the rules relating to the procedure to be adopted for the several processes connected with the erection of temples, etc., commencing from the withdrawal and ending with the establishment of powers, etc., but involving features not countenanced by the Veda. (36) Hṛd-bheda-tantra—which, though aiming at bursting through the six lotuses from Mūlādhāra onwards to the thousand-petalled one, falls within the province of the Kāpālīka-tantra, as it has recourse to the adoption of Vāmācāra. (37) Tantra-bheda, (38) Guhya-tantra—which involve retaliatory processes, both overt and covert, aiming at the destruction of what has been achieved by other Tantra-s and the causation of severe pain to living beings, and as such are reprehensible. (39) Kalā-vāda—expounding the secrets relating to the digits of the Moon, such as are dealt with in Vātsyāyana's sexual science, which, though dealing with a very useful branch of knowledge, involves such objectionable features as the grasping and releasing of Kalā-s, the power of influencing the ten parts, the induction of the Candra-kalā-s and the countenancing of the wicked practice of alluring others' wives, and are on that account reprehensible. Although these have no direct bearing on the Kāpālīka-tantra, still they amount, in effect, to such perverse doctrines that those who have recourse to such practices are bound to have more or less a leaning towards such views. (40) Kalā-sāra—which expounds the rules relating to the excellence of colour and is, as such, a Vāmācāra. (41) Kuṇḍikā-mata—which deals with the attainment of marvellous powers by administering special pills. (42) Matottara—which deals with the conquest of quicksilver by special processes laying claim to alchemic and panaceal virtues. (43) Vīṇākhyā—which deals with command over a Yakṣiṇī of that name, having influence over sexual virility. (44) Trotala—dealing with magical tankards, collyria and sandals, the first credited with marvellous medicinal properties, the second with magical clairvoyant powers, and the third with mysterious powers of locomotion. (45) Trotalottara—credited with the power of bringing the sixty-four-thousand Yakṣiṇī-s face to face. (46) Pañcāmṛta—dealing with the immortality inhering in the Piṇḍāṇḍa, microcosm of the five elements, and the bestowal of such immortality on the votary of the Tantra. This is also of the Kāpālīka type.

(47) Rūpa-bheda, (48) Bhūtoḍḍāmara, (49) Kula-sāra, (50) Kuloḍḍisa, (51) Kula-cūḍāmaṇi—all of which are credited with the power of bringing about death and are, as such, not recognized by the Veda. (52) Sarva-jñānot-tara, (53) Mahā-kālī-mata, (54) Aruṇes'a, (55) Modinīsa, (56) Vikunṭhesvara—the five Tantras, which have to be given up as they deal with the tenets of the Digambara-s. (57) Pūrvāmnāya, (58) Pascimāmnāya, (59) Dakṣiṇāmnāya, (60) Uttarāmnāya, (61) Nir-uttarāmnāya, (62) Vimala, (63) Vimalotta and (64) Devī-mata—which have reference to the doctrines of the Kṣapaṇaka-s and are as such to be discarded.

These are the sixty-four Tantra-s enumerated in the Vāma-keśvara-tantra, quoted by Lakṣmī-dhara and explained by him. Bhāskara-rāya, the reputed commentator of the same treatise, however, differs from Lakṣmī-dhara in the enumeration of the Tantra-s and treats (4 to 11) the Bhairavāṣṭaka as one Tantra, and (31 and 32) Vāma-juṣṭa and Mahā-deva as a single Tantra giving the name of Mahocchuṣman to it, and includes eight Tantra-s not enumerated by Lakṣmī-dhara, viz., (1) Mahā-lakṣmī-mata, (2) Siddha-yogīśvarī-mata, (3) Ku-rūpikā-mata, (4) Deva-rūpikā-mata, (5) Sarva-vīra-mata, (6) Vimalā-mata, (7) Jñānārṇava and (8) Vīrā-valī in the list. He also calls into question the view held by Lakṣmī-dhara of considering the sixty-four Tantra-s as reprehensible and as upholding practices which have not the sanction of the Veda-s, and avers that, as the Tantra-s have been recognized by the Vāma-keśvara-tantra and the Kalpa-sūtra-s as Śāstra-s, and as all S'āstra-s have the sanction of the Upanisads. Laksmī-dhara's view is either coloured by prejudice or due to an imperfect understanding of the true import and utility of these Tantra-s. It may however be added in Lakṣmī-dhara's defence that he pins his faith on a saying attributed to Īśvara, which he quotes to the effect that both the Mīśra- and Kaula-paths are to be discarded. He therefore holds that the Samaya-mārga alone should be followed by the twice-born and that such is also the view of Saṃkara-bhagavat-pāda.

Thy Tantra—taking 'Idam' as the attribute of the word 'Tantram,' Lakṣmi-dhara understands the words to imply, "this, i.e., what immediately follows (in the next stanza), Thy Tantra". Bhāskara-rāya in his Setu-bandha, however, holds a different opinion, viz., that by the words 'Thy Tantra' used in this stanza, the Vāmakes'vara-tantra is meant, incidentally referring to the views held by others that it is the Jñānārṇava and yet others that it is the Tantra-rāja; he refutes them for the reason, among others, that those Tantra-s themselves depend in certain respects upon the Vāmakes'vara-tantra, for support. Evidently he takes the word 'Idam' as an attribute of 'Kṣīti-talam,' meaning 'this world'.

Acyutānanda, in his commentary on this stanza, alludes to the prevalent tradition that Śiva is in the habit of narrating Tantra-s to the Devī in Kailāsa, which Gaṇeśa records then and there, and after completion communicates to Maharṣi-s on Earth, and this practice continues for all time. Hence none of the Tantra-s could, according to the orthodox view referred to above, be considered unauthorized because of their later origin, as their validity will hold for all time. The commentator holds that whatever is established by the Purāṇa-s and the Āgama-s should be held to be ever existent by the wise and not called into question from the point of view of the time of their origin, as they appear and disappear, according as they are revealed or withdrawn, and their importance lies entirely in the Siddhi-s to which they lead and the actual results flowing from them. 'Thy Tantra', which is significantly called 'Sva-tantra', is, in this view the creation of the Lord and should not be confounded with the sixty-four Tantra-s.

It may be observed here that the authorities relied upon by the Samaya school, to which Lakṣmī-dhara belongs, are alleged by them to be Mokṣa-s'āstra-s, or authorities inculcating the attainment of Mokṣa through the practice of the internal form of worship advocated by them. It is not however apparent on what authority this school of worship maintains that the Kaula form of worship does not lead to the attainment of Mokṣa and how, beyond the assertion that the Kaula practice of worshipping the Devi in the Mūlādhara is reprehensible, they seek to support it by quoting chapter and verse of any scriptural authority, which they hold as settling the question one way or the other.

Ami ḥṛl-lekhābhis tisṛbhir avasāneṣu ghaṭitā

O Mother ! Śiva, Śakti, Kāma and Kṣiti ; and then, Ravi, Śīta-kiraṇa, Samara, Haṁsa and Śakra ; and thereafter, Parā, Māra and Hari ; these (three sets of) syllables, when conjoined severally at their ends with the three Hṛī-lekhā-s, become the components of Thy name.

The Tantra premised by the words 'Thy Tantra' in the previous stanza, as understood by Lakṣmī-dhara, is further elaborated in this stanza, which may be termed as the coping stone of the Samayin-s' arch of worship. The Mantra itself, the Ṣoḍaśākṣarī, it is said, cannot be given out publicly, but should be imparted by the Guru to the devout pupil in secret. This may be inferred from the fact that the sixteenth syllable does not find a place in the description given in the stanza. Merely because the stanza makes mention of only fifteen syllables, it should not be understood that the Mantra indicated is the Pañca-daśākṣarī. The sixteenth syllable is the fourth Khaṇḍa of the Mantra and, like the fourth Pāda of the Gāyat-trī, should be muttered only by adepts who are highly evolved spiritually, as only they could conceive with their minds the fourth Khaṇḍa, which is beyond the range of speech and thought and transcends all the Tattva-s, being of the essence of pure consciousness. The stanza merely mentions fifteen conventional names indicative of syllables, which, when construed in the proper way, would yield the following result; Śiva is 'Ka'; Śakti represents 'E', Kāma, 'Ī': 'Kṣiti, 'La'; this is the first Khaṇḍa. Ravi is 'Ha'; Śīta-kirana, 'Sa'; Smara, 'Ka'; Haṃsa, 'Ha'; and Śakra, 'La'; this is the second Khaṇḍa. Parā is 'Sa'; Māra, 'Ka'; and Hari, 'La'; this is the third Khaṇḍa. When the Hṛī-lekhā, i.e., 'Hṛīm', is added to each of the three Khaṇḍa-s, the result is the Pañca-dasākṣarī-mantra. Thy name—by treating 'Nāma' of the last line as an indeclinable, the last words may be construed as 'verily become what constitutes Thee'. The chief component of the Mantra, viz., the Ramā-bija, when added on to the end, will convert the Pañca-dasākṣarī into the Ṣoḍasākṣarī, which is really implied by the stanza. These sixteen syllables are the sixteen Candra-kalā-s or the fifteen Tithi-s of the lunar fortnight, and the sixteenth designated the Cit-kalā, with Tri-pura-sundarī and other Nityā-s as their presiding deities. The first syllable 'Ka' with the last 'La' of the Pañca-dasākṣarī, makes the Pratyāhāra, 'Kalā', implying all the Mātṛkā-s contained therein. Soma, Sūrya and Agni, which preside over the three Khaṇḍa-s of the Mantra, respectively indicate sixteen, twenty-four (by reduplication of the number indicated), and ten Kalās, thus making up fifty Kalā-s; these constitute the fifty Mātṛkā-s of the Devī, which are known by the Pratyāhāra Ākṣa (-mālā), made up of the 'A', occurring before the 'Ē' of the first Khaṇḍa, and 'Kṣa,' yielded by the 'Ka' and 'Sa' of the third Khaṇḍa.

Kāmes'vara-sūri fully sets out the implications of the several conventional names occurring in the stanza, also in a different manner and as construed by him it would mean : O Mother of all the Devatā-s ! S'iva—indicating Sadā-s'iva, and Bhava, Mṛḍa and Rudra taking their origin from him ; S'akti—indicating the Tri-pura-sundarī and through her the sixteen Nītyā-s including herself, as also other deities; Kāma—indicating Manas and through it, its functions, volition, etc.; Kṣiti—the Earth and through it the five elements, then, Ravi—known as Satya, the illuminator of all including the Earth, and through mutual affinity the fire; S'ita-kiraṇa—the Moon; Smara—his comrade; Haṃsa—Brahman, the creator; Śakra—the king of the gods; thereafter, the Parā-s—indicating other Śakti-s; Māra—the Yama, who deals death to all; and Hari—Viṣṇu, who have respectively been assigned their seats from Kailāsa up to Vaikuṇṭha by Thee, the syllables indicated by the above along with the three Hṛl-lekhā-s or groups of the inner senses with the characteristics of Rhythm, Motion and Inertia, all these gods and the Matrka-s reputed to be Thy form serve Thee.

The first four syllables of the Ṣoḍaśākṣarī constitute the first Khaṇḍa, relating to Agni, representing Kriyā-śakti, the Jāgrat state, the Viśva-vṛtti and Tamo-guṇa. The next five syllables constitute the second Khaṇḍa, relating to Sūrya, representing Icchā-śakti, the Svapna state, the Taijasa-vṛtti and Rajo-guṇa. The Hṛl-lekhā between the two represents the Rudra-granthi. The next three syllables constitute the third Khaṇḍa relating to Soma, representing Jñāna-śakti, the Suṣupti-state, the Prājña-vṛtti and Sattva-guṇa. The Hṛl-lekhā between the second and third Khaṇḍa-s represents the Viṣṇu-granthi. The fourth Khaṇḍa of one syllable, known as the Candra-kalā, which should be imparted by the Guru, is implied after the three aforesaid Khaṇḍa-s.

The Hṛī-lekhā between the third and fourth Khaṇḍa-s represents the Brahma-granthi.

The sixteen syllables of the Mantra are to be looked upon as made up of the sixteen Nityā-s. The reason why the Parā-kalā, which is of the essence of pure consciousness, is known as Nityā is because of its resemblance to the sixteenth Kalā of the Moon of the Sahasrāra, reflected on the sixteenth petal of the sixteen-petalled lotus of the Viśuddhi-cakra. This alone is the essential and prime cause of the other fifteen, which are only its subordinate divisions. This sixteenth Kalā is 'S' plus 'r' plus 'ī' plus 'ṁ', from which the Vidyā itself derives its name of Srī-vidyā. The sixteen syllables form the Prakṛti-s of the sixteen Kalā-s or Tithi-s commencing from the Sūkla-pratipad on to the Pūrṇimā, and similarly from Kṛṣṇa-pratipad on to the Amā-vāsyā respectively, of the bright and dark lunar fortnights. Pratipad, the first Kalā, takes its origin from Sūrya in the bright fortnight and enters into it in the dark fortnight of the lunar month. Similarly the other Kalā-s are to be understood to take their origin from and enter into the Sūrya to the bright and dark fortnights respectively. When there is an interval of fifteen Kalā-s between the Sun and the Moon, we have the full-moon, and when such interval vanishes, we have the new-moon. According to the Kaulācāra, the Nityā corresponding to the Kalā of every day should be worshipped. The Samayin-s on the other hand worship internally the sixteenth Kalā of the form of pure consciousness along with the Kalā of the day, every day. Although the sixteenth, known as the Cit-kalā, is sometimes given the name of 'Tri-pura-sundarī' by which name the first Kalā is known, it should not be understood that the two Kalā-s are the same. The sixteen Nityā-s have their position on the sixteen petals of the Viśuddhi-cakra commencing from the petal pointing eastwards ; similarly the twelve Āditya-s have their position on the twelve petals of the An-āhata and exercise their influence over the twelve months of the year, one over each.

The influence of the Sun and the Moon over the human body and the part taken by them in helping the Yogin in the successful accomplishment of Yoga may be summarized thus : The Sun and the Moon incessantly influence the Idā- and Piṅgalā-nāḍi-s day and night. The Moon through the Idā in-fills all the Seventy-two-thousand Nāḍi-s with his nectar. The Sun in his turn gathers up the same nectar. As and when the Sun and the Moon have their conjunction in the Ādhāra-cakra, there is the new-moon, during which the Kuṇḍalinī has its sleep in the hollow of the Mulādhāra, wherein is gathered the nectar flowing out of the lunar disc, melted in the presence of the rays of the Sun. Hence its sleeping state is represented to be during the dark fortnight. When the Yogin controls the passage of the Sun and the Moon along with the vital air through the Nāḍi-s, by performing Kumbhaka, the Sun and the Moon being deprived of their functions of in-filling and gathering the nectar, the Amṛta-kunḍa in the Mulādhāra gets dried up by the fire induced by the vital air, the Kuṇḍalinī becomes famished and is roused from sleep, as it were, with the Phūt-kāra of the snake, bursts through the three Granthi-s and bites the disc of the Moon in the middle of the thousand-petalled lotus. The shower of nectar flowing from the Moon drenches the lunar region of the Ājñā-cakra, and the whole body gets filled with nectar from the shower. Hence the fifteen Kalā-s of the Moon in the Ājñā-cakra then become Nityā-s, perpetually shining. These Kalā-s then reach and pervade the Visuddhi-cakra. The lunar disc in the middle of the thousand-petalled lotus is the Baindava-sthāna. That Kalā of the character of pure consciousness is said to be of the form of Bliss. That alone is the Tri-pura-sundarī. Hence follows the secret of the Yogin's successful accomplishment of rousing the Kuṇḍalinī only in the bright half of the lunar month. All the Tithi-s of the bright half are therefore known as the Full-moon, while the Tithi-s of the dark half inhere in the New-moon. Hence the Mūlādhāra is the region which is pitch dark. The Svādhiṣṭhāna being subject to the influence of the Sun and the Moon is a region of darkness and light mixed together, while the Maṇipūra, though essentially belonging to the region of Fire, is a region of darkness and light mixed together, owing to the reflection, in the water there, of the rays of the Sun. The An-āhata is the region of brightness. Thus, till the An-āhata is reached, the regions of the Cakra-s are either dark or of a mixed nature. The Visuddhi lies in the region of the Moon. The Ājñā, being the seat of the Moon, is the region of nectar. As in these two regions there is the admixture of the Sun's rays, there is no Moon-light. The thousand-petalled lotus, on the other hand, is a region of Moon-light alone. The Moon there being possessed of the Nitya-kalā is perpetual, without waxing and waning. The disc of that Moon is the Srī-cakra, while its Kalā is the Sādā-khyā. The Tri-koṇa is the Mūlādhāra. The eight-spoked Cakra is the Svādhiṣṭhāna. The inner ten-spoked Cakra is the Maṇi-pūra. The outer ten-spoked Cakra is the An-āhata. The fourteen-spoked one is the Viśuddhi. The four triangles of Śiva constitute the Ājñā-cakra. The Bindu-sthāna in the quadrilateral is the thousand-petalled lotus. The Moon of the Ājñā has fifteen Kalā-s and contains the reflection of the sixteenth. In the disc of the Moon of the form of the Srī-cakra, there is only one Kalā and that the Paramā-kalā! The three Anu-svāra-s of the Pañca-das'ākṣarī indicate the Bindu and, by implication, the Nāda thereof. Thus, the Srī-cakra of the character of Nāda, Bindu and Kalā is also made up of three Khaṇḍa-s. The Sādākhya, which is the same as the Srī-vidyā, lies beyond the Nāda, Bindu and Kalā. The fifty Kalā-s described above inhere in the sixteen Nityā-s as follows: The sixteen vowels, the sixteen consonants from 'Ka' to 'Ta', the sixteen consonants from 'Tha' to 'Sa', these inhere in the sixteen Nityā-s in triads. The Akāśa-bija 'Ha' inheres in the Ākāśa of the Bindu; while 'Kṣa', which is composed of 'Ka' and 'Ṣa', inheres in the Nityā-s corresponding to its components. The sixteen Nityā-s being of the form of the sixteen syllables, the sixteen syllables being of the form of the fifty Mātrkā-s, the fifty Mātrkā-s being of the form of the Sun, the Moon and the Fire, which in their turn form the three Granthi's, thus the four kinds of harmonious relations become patent.

Similarly the Cakra-s and the Mantra-s harmonize thus: The three Hrīm-s and the S'ri-bija inhere in the form of the Bindu of the Tri-koṇa, which represents the four Śiva-cakra-s. The letters comprised in the Pratyāhāra-s 'Kalā' and 'Akṣa' inhere in the S'ri-cakra as follows, the four semi-vowels and the four sibilants in the Aṣṭa-koṇa; the twenty letters from 'Ka' to 'Ma' the nasals excepted, in the two Dasāra-s; the nasal consonants through the Anu-svāra, the Anu-svāra and the Visarga, in the Bindu; and the remaining fourteen vowels, in the Catur-dasāra.

Even as the Mantra is composed of three Khaṇḍa-s, the Cakra may be looked upon from the aspects of Soma, Sūrya and Agni. The sixteen Kalā-s of the Moon inhere in the Indu-khaṇḍa of the Mantra, which in its turn inheres in the Indu-aspect of the Yantra. So also the twenty-four Kalā-s of the Sun inhere in the Saura-khaṇḍa of the Mantra, which inhere in the Solar aspect of the Yantra. Likewise, the ten Kalā-s of Agni inhere in the Agni-khaṇḍa of the Mantra, which inheres in the Agni aspect of the Yantra. Thus is the harmony between the Kalā-s of the Yantra and the Mantra.

The names of the sixteen Kalā-s as gathered from the Veda-s are: Dars'a, Dṛṣṭā, Darsatā, Viśva-rūpā, Sudarśanā, Āpyāyamānā, Āpyāyamānā, Āpyāyā, Sūnṛtā, Irā, Āpūryamāṇā, Āpūryamāṇā, Pūrayanti, Pūrṇā, Paurṇamāsi and Cit-kalā. The deities that preside over them respectively are Tri-pura-sundarī, Kāmes'varī, Bhagmālīnī, Nitya-klīṇā, Bheruṇḍā, Vahni-vāsini, Mahāvidyes'varī, Śiva-dūti, Tvaritā, Kula-sundarī, Nityā, Nilapatākā, Vijayā, Sarva-maṅgalā, Jvālā-mālinikā and Cit-kalā. The Tattva-s represented by them respectively are Śive, Śakti, Māyā, Śuddha-vidyā, Jala, Tejas, Vāyu, Manas, Pṛthivī, Ākāśa, Vidyā, Maheśvara, Para-tattva, Ātma-tattva, Sadā-siva-tattva and Sādākhyā-tattva. The Devatā influencing the entire group is Kāma-deva, while Kāmes'varī presides over them all. Even as the sixteen syllables of the Mantra are divided into four Khaṇḍa-s, the Kalā-s may be divided in the same manner into four Khaṇḍa-s, with Agni, Sūrya, Soma and Sādākhyā as their presiding deities.

Kaivalyāśrama takes this stanza as indicating the Lopā-mudrā- v i d y ā, the Bija of all Mantra-s, in which case the first Khaṇḍa will have to be interpreted thus : 'Śiva' stands for 'Ha', 'Śakti' for 'Sa', 'Kāma' for 'Ka', and 'Kṣiti' for 'La', the other Khaṇḍa-s being understood as in the other case. He is also of opinion that the Trayo-dasākṣari-vidyā of Durvāsas could also be taken as indicated by this stanza, by dropping the first two Hṛl-lekhā-s of the Lopā-mudrā-vidyā, generally known as Hādi-vidyā. According to the Dīṇḍima, this stanza contains the essence of the Veda-s. It quotes from the Tri-purā-tāpinī Upaniṣad in support of this view. Certain commentators not only take this stanza to refer to the Hādi-vidyā, but also state that the Mantra indicated is Ṣoḍaśākṣari, which forms the basis of the Samaya form of worship, the sixteenth syllable not expressly mentioned having to be learnt from the Guru.

O Goddess eternal ! having placed this triad of Smara, Yoni and Lakṣmī before Thy Mantra, some (devotées of Thine), bent on the boundless enjoyment of Beatitude, worship Thee with rosaries strung with Cintā-maṇi beads, while offering hundreds of oblations with streams of Surabhi's ghee, on the fire of S'ivā (triangle).

This stanza ostensibly deals with the worship of the Devi by the Samayin-s, with all the external forms obtaining among Kaṇḍa-s, while the next deals with the form of the Devī herself in the same strain. Stanza 35 clothes her in the aspect of pure matter, which is the basic principle of the doctrine of the Kaula-s. The next six stanzas of the Ānanda-laharī exclusively deal with the Samaya doctrine.

Starting with the Devi's Mantra, as given in the previous stanza, as the basis, this stanza deals with the procedure to be adopted by votaries desirous of achieving the special purposes of acquisition of power, wealth, beatitude, etc., without having recourse to any external forms of worship or prayer. The device suggested herein is the placing before the Mantra of the triad of syllables represented by the conventional names, Smara, Yoni and Lakṣmī, which are capable of being interpreted in two ways: (1) 'Smara', meaning the Madana-bīja—'Klīm'; 'Yoni', meaning the Bhuvaneśvarī-bīja—'Hrīm'; and 'Lakṣmī', meaning the Ramā-bīja—'S'rīm'. By placing these three before the Kādi-vidyā indicated by the previous stanza and meditating upon the Devī as of the form of the resultant Mantra, it is claimed that Mahā-bhoga, immense wealth and influence, is vouchsafed to the votary. 'Mahā-bhoga' may also be construed as 'final beatitude', the boundless enjoyment of which is the Yogin's goal. It is on this sense that our English rendering has been based. (2) By placing the trisyllable 'Ka E Ī', obtained from 'Smara' meaning—'Ka', 'Yoni' meaning—'Ē', and 'Lakṣmi' meaning—'Ī', in the place of 'Ha Sa Ka' of the Hādī-vidyā indicated by the previous stanza, the Mantra stands converted to Kādī-vidyā. The Hādī-vidyā is credited with the power of bestowing Liberation and is therefore considered superior to the Kādī-vidyā, which is credited only with the power of bestowing enjoyment of all forms, in this as well as in the other worlds.

There is also the reading 'Cintā-maṇi-guṇa-nibaddhā-kṣara-layāḥ', in which case the meaning would be—'and attain Liberation in the Akṣara, viz., the Śabda-brahman, that is the Cit-kalā, associated with the Guṇa-s—Sattva, Rajas and Tamas'. Cintā-maṇi is a gem to which is credited the virtue of bestowing all that is desired. As the Mātṛkā-s of the Devī have similar virtues, the word 'Cintā-maṇi-guṇa' may be taken to mean "the assemblage of Mātṛkā-s strung in the form of a rosary, with 'Kṣa' serving as the Meru, the central bead, (which should not be crossed, while performing Japa)". Surabhi is the Kāma-dhenu, the celestial cow, granting all desires. Surabhi is also understood as meaning 'fragrant' and is said to indicate the fragrance of the current of nectar flowing in Go-loka, the abode of Viṣṇu. On the Fire of Sivā (triangle)—as the form of worship indicated her is entirely internal in accordance with the Samayācāra, the worshipper is enjoined to place the Agni of the Svādhiṣṭhāna in the Baindava-sthāna, which is the Tri-koṇa, and then conceive of the Tri-koṇa with the Agni as transposed upwards and, at the same time, the Devī of the thousand-petalled lotus as transposed downwards to the heart, and mentally perform offerings over the Fire as described in the stanza.

Kaivalyāśrama, who adopts the view that the Mantra indicated by the previous stanza is Hādi-vidyā and is turned to Kādi-vidyā by adopting the changes referred to in the first line, construes this stanza as describing the worship of the Devī in the following manner: Some devotees of Thine, with their external senses rendered devoid of their functions, by employing their minds in the investigation of the Bhāvārtha, Saṃpradāyārtha, Nigarbhārtha, Kaulikārtha, Rahasyārtha and Paramarahasyārtha of the Mantra,¹ with a view to the total annihilation of all previous impressions left on their minds relating to worldly attachment, which is so full of egotism and inimical to the attainment of the Paramātmān, offer them as oblations of continuous streams of nectar-like ghee on the sacrificial Fire, effulgent with the radiance brought about by the mental attitude, 'I am Śiva', that refined alter-ego of the altruistic type. 'Juhvantaḥ' is treated by some as the Present participle Nom. singular of 'Hu' 3rd conj. Parasm. 'to sacrifice'. But the correct form is 'Juhvataḥ'; probably the form used is archaic. With a view to avoid the grammatical blunder some suggest the form 'Juhvānāḥ', which is equally open to the same objection, the root being only Parasmai-padin. To avoid this contingency, Kaivalyāsrama construes 'Juhv-antaḥ-surabhi-ghṛta-dhārā-huti-sataiḥ', as a single compound word meaning, "with hundreds of oblations of streams of fragrant ghee flowing out of the Juhū, the ladle." The same commentator understands the stanza as indicating Antar-yāga and signifying: Some devotees, intent on offering the full oblation (Pūrṇāhuti), worship Thee, conceiving, with their minds, Thee, of the form of the Kuṇḍalinī, stretching from the Mūlādhārā to the Brahmarandhra, in the form of the string of the fifty Māṭṛkā-s, themselves assuming a firm posture, and offering the Pūrṇāhuti of a continuous stream of ghee of the form of Su-vāsanā-s, through the ladle of Un-marī, over the Fire of Śiva, with the mental attitude, 'I am Śiva'.

O Glorious Goddess ! Thou art the frame of Śaṃbhu with the Sun and the Moon as the breasts. I conceive Thy flawless frame to be Navātman (Śaṃbhu). Hence the relationship of the essential and the accessory, in the case of Ye both, equipoised of Transcendent Bliss and Transcendent (Consciousness), stands even.

The Sun and the Moon—the Devi's breasts are referred to as these two heavenly bodies, which at the same time form part of Kāla, one of the nine aspects of Śiva. Hence they form part of his frame. Thy flawless frame—which is no other than the Śrī-cakra, made up of the nine Yoni-s, the nine aspects of the Devī. Navātman—Śaṃbhu is characterized by the nine Vyūha-s: Kāla, Kula, Nāman, Jñāna, Citta, Nāda, Bindu, Kalā and Jīva. Kāla designates duration, from the period taken by the twinkling of an eye up to the end of infinite Time. The Sun and the Moon are comprised hereunder. Kula comprehends blue, white and other colours. Nāman is conventional nomenclature, such as Ghaṭa, Paṭa and others. Jñāna is knowledge of the concrete and the abstract type. Citta is made up of Ahaṃ-kāra, Citta, Buddhi, Mahat and Manas. Nāda is made up of Parā, Paśyantī, Madhyamā and Vaikharī sounds. Bindu is made up of the six Cakra-s, the Mūlādhāra and others. Kalā comprises the fifty letters of the Alphabet. Jīva is the group of Jīvātman-s, the enjoyers. The Devī is also characterized by the nine Vyūha-s: Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā, Raudrī and Ambikā, the four Yoni-s of the Śrī-cakra pointing downwards; and Icchā, Jñānā, Kriyā, S'āntā and Parā, the five Yoni-s of the same pointing upwards. Ānanda-bhairava who is Śaṃbhu of the form of Transcendent Bliss is said to be identical with Mahā-bhairavi, the Śakti of the form of Transcendent Consciousness. Hence either of them is neither more nor less than the other. The two together form the whole. One cannot conceive of the one as separate from the other. Hence the relationship of the essential and the accessory subsists mutually between them. While the functions of creation, sustenance and destruction are being discharged, the Devi's element predominates and Īśvara's subserves. After the Deluge, when those functions are in a state of quiescence, Īśvara's element prevails and the Devi's subserves. Hence the predominance and the subservience of the two are evenly matched. This stanza, in a way, indicates the oneness of Śiva and the Śakti as Ādhāra and Ādheya.

O youthful spouse of Śiva ! Thou art the Mind, Thou the Ether, Thou the Air, Thou the Fire, Thou the Water, and Thou the Earth. When Thou hast transformed Thyself (thus), there is nothing beyond. Thyself, with a view to manifesting Thyself in the form of the Universe, inwardly assumest the form of Consciousness and Bliss.

With a view to demonstrating the Devī's being of the essence of the eight Mūrti-s, the author extols her in this stanza from all points of view.

The Mind—the Yajamāna, one of the eight Mūrti-s, the sacrificer, who makes up the resolve, 'I shall perform the sacrifice'. As the Moon is, according to a Vedic text, derived from the Mind, the word 'Mind' comprehends the Moon also. The Fire—owing to the close affinity subsisting between the Sun and Fire, the Sun is also comprehended by the term 'Fire'. Thus the Mind and the five elements, which the Devī is represented to be, clothe her with Aṣṭa-mūrti-tva—the Aṣṭa-mūrti-s constituting the Universe. Consciousness and Bliss—are the forms of the Brahman, which are interwoven with the eight forms related above. The esoteric significance of the tradition may be given as follows : O Goddess ! thou art the Mind existing in the Ājñā, the Ether in the Visuddhi, the Air in the An-āhata, the Fire in the Svādhiṣṭhāna, the Water in the Maṇi-pūra, and the Earth in the Mūlādhāra, all in their subtle forms. While thou art in this transformed state in the Microcosm, as Viśva, Taijasa and Prājña, as well as in the Macrocosm, as Virāj, Hiranya-garbha and Antar-yāmin, with a view to assuming a gross form, thou, with the power of thy Icchā-s'akti, assumest the forms of the S'akti, (i.e., Cit), and Śiva, (i.e., Ānanda), in this manner. This phenomenal world is essentially evolved out of the five elements and their subtle variants. The latter are only the other forms of the Devī. After the Deluge there remains only the Brahman, which is no other than Śiva and the S'akti combined. Śiva stands apart, all alone, with no functions of his own. The S'akti in combination with Śiva is the prime cause of the Universe. The Universe is the manifestation of the S'akti. Forms and names are transient, while the substance is eternal. It is this substance, the substratum below names and forms, which is operated upon by and evolved out of the S'akti.

From the accompanying table it will be seen that the

Devī, who transcends all, manifests herself as the six Deva-s, with their six abodes, represented by the six Tattva-s, which have, as their centres, the six Cakra-s, from a combination of which the entire Universe is made. The Devī, notwithstanding her gross and subtle transformations, remains the Cit, transcending all Tattva-s, in combination with the Bliss of the Para-mātman.

TATTVA-S	LOKA-S	DEVA-S	CAKRA-S
Manas	Satya	Parā-s'akti	Sahasrāra
Ākāśa	Tapas	S'iva	Ājñā
Vāyu	Jana	Sadā-s'iva	Viśuddhi
Tejas	Mahar	Mahes'vara	An-āhata
Ap	Suvar	Rudra	Svādhiṣṭhāna
Prthivī	Bhuvar	Viṣṇu	Mani-pūra
	Bhūr	Brahman	Mūlādhāra

According to the Uttara-kaula doctrine, the Parā-sakti which is the Pradhāna is the creator of the Universe. The Devī, being the Pradhāna, there is no need for her subservience to any other Tattva.

I salute the Supreme Saṃbhu, who stands in Thy Ājñā-cakra, who is effulgent with the radiance of myriads of Suns and Moons, whose (left) side is embraced by the Supreme Consciousness, and by worshipping whom, with all devotion, one takes abode in that luminous region, which transcends the reach of the Sun, the Moon and Fire, devoid of all agony.

In the following six stanzas, the six Cakra-s of the Devī's form are dealt with, in the order of evolution, from the subtle to the gross, and the votary is represented to worship Śiva and the Śakti, as their presiding deities, in the manner in which they appear to him in the Cakra-s. Supreme Saṃbhu—the name Rara-saṃbhu-nātha is given to this deity. In Thy Ājñā-cakra—(1) who is within the ambit of thy command, i.e., ever at thy command; or (2) standing in the Ājñā-cakra of two petals in the middle of thy eyebrows, or (3) in the Manas-tattva of thy form. Kāmeśvara-sūri here observes as follows: If the question arises—how can there be the Ājñā-cakra in the form of the Devī, who has no special form of her own, the answer is that even though the real form of the Devī may not have the Cakra, still, in the form assumed by her in sport, there is the necessity for the Cakra-s, so as to enable her to meditate on her own form as combined with her Lord's. In this connection he criticizes the view held by Lakṣmī-dhara, who interprets 'Tavājñā-cakra-stham' as "the four Śiva-cakra-s of the Śrī-cakra, situated in the middle of the eyebrows of the practitioner", and "not the two-petalled Ājñā-cakra", by pointing out that the word 'Tava' will in that case be meaningless or superfluous, and adds that 'Tava' is absolutely necessary for the reason pointed out in connection with the necessity for assuming the Cakra-s in the Devī's form, and that it is the two-petalled lotus of the Ājñā-cakra that is really meant. This criticism will hold good in the case of the next five stanzas also.

The Supreme Consciousness—i.e., the Devī of that form, to wit, thyself. She is given the name of Cit-parāmbā. Which transcends the reach of—for, the Sun, the Moon and Fire are situated in the nether regions, viz., the respectively, i.e., far below the Sahasrāra which is the region of his quest. The Moon in the Sahasrāra being Nitya-kalā would not come under this description. Luminous region—the Sahasrāra, the abode of perpetual moonshine. In the case of the reading ‘Nir-āloke’, the meaning is ‘where there is no light (of the kind known to us)’, Agony—resulting from the cycles of births and deaths. The forms of the deities, Para-sambhu-nātha and Cit-parāmbā, should be conceived of in the middle, and the sixty-four Mānasa-mayūkha-s as surrounding them, when practising meditation as indicated in this stanza.¹ Some reverse the order of stanzas 36-41 in the ascending order of the Cakra-s.

The deities referred to in the stanza are given the names of Vyomes'vara and Vyomes'vari and are to be meditated upon by the practitioner, as in the middle, surrounded by the seventy-two Nābhasa (Ethereal) Mayūkha-s.¹ Generating Vyoman—being the prime cause of Ether, as borne out by the Śruti, 'From the Ātman is generated Ether'. She-patridge—the mystic quality of subsisting on moonbeams is traditionally ascribed to the Cakora bird. Some commentators take the S'iva indicated in this stanza as Ardha-nārīś'vara.

I worship that unique pair of swans, subsisting entirely on the honey of the blooming lotus of wisdom (the An-āhata) and gliding over the Mānasa of great minds ; from whose mutual cackle, there results the exposition of the eighteen Vidyā-s, and which extracts all the good from the bad, even as it would; milk from the water (which dilutes it).

Pair of swans—the 'Haṃ' in 'Haṃsaḥ' indicates the male-S'iva, and the 'Saḥ' indicates the female-S'akti. Hence the pair of syllables that make up the word, indicating S'iva and the S'akti combined, is compared to a Haṃsa-pair swimming in the minds of the great. Further, tradition ascribes to this bird the mystic property of separating the pure 'milk from the water with which it is adulterated. Hence it is that the Haṃsa-pair is said to extract the good from the bad. The names of the couple of deities referred to are given as Haṃses'vara and Haṃses'varī. Mānasa—there is a pun on this word, implying Mānasa, the mind and also the lake of that name, far-famed for its swans. Great minds—some high-souled Samayin-s, who are adepts in the several stages of Yoga, are meant by this. Mutual cackle—when the two deities are in the waking state and when Rhythm predominates, their conversation assumes the form of the exposition of the Veda-s and the Sāstra-s, through the Yogin-s in whose hearts they dwell; when Mobility predominates, it results in the appeasement of hunger, thirst, etc., of the Yogin-s; similarly, with the preponderance of Inertia, anger, fear, etc., are generated in the Yogin-s. The eighteen Vidyā-s are (1) S'ikṣā, (2) Kalpa, (3) Vyākaraṇa, (4) Nirukta, (5) Jyotiṣa, (6) Chandas, (7) Ṛc, (8) Yajus, (9) Sāman, (10) Atharvan, (11) Pūrva- and Uttara-mīmāṃsā, (12) Nyāya, (13) Purāṇa, (14) Dharma-s'āstra, (15) Āyur-veda, (16) Dhanur-veda, (17) Gāṇḍharva and (18) Nīti-s'āstra. There is also the reading 'Pariṇatim samādhatte', when the meaning would be, "by constantly conversing about which (pair of swans) (the Sādhaka, practitioner) attains ripe mastery over the eighteen Vidyā-s and discriminates between good and bad, even as (the Haṃsa) would, between milk and water."

The worship indicated in this stanza, of the pair of swans in the heart-lotus, is followed by some Samayin-s. But Saṃkara-bhagavat-pāda, as explained by him in his commentary on the Subhagodaya, is of the opinion that S'iva in the form of a flame, known as S'ikhin, shines like a spout of light in the An-āhata-cakra, in conjunction with the Devi of the name of S'ikhinī. The deities Haṃses'vara and Haṃses'varī should be meditated upon as in the middle of the Cakra surrounded by the fifty-four Vāyavya (Aerial) Mayūkha-s.¹

O Mother ! I glorify that Samvarta, who abides in Thy Svādhiṣṭhāna, presiding over Agni-tattva, and also that great Samayā, whose glance, glistening with pity, applies the chilling (soothing) process, when His mighty stare, pregnant with rage, consumes the worlds.

The names of the deities to be meditated upon in the Maṇi-pūra-cakra are said to be Meghes'vara and Saudāmanī. There is also the reading, 'Smara-mihira-taptam,' which means, "consumed by the Sun of Desire". 'Hara-mihira' is taken by some to indicate the twelve Āditya-s, of the form of Hara, appearing at the Deluge to consume all the three worlds.

The following points culled from Lakṣmī-dhara's elaborate commentary on this stanza are noteworthy; The Siddha ghuṭikā, a treatise on occultism, not known now to be extant, speaks of Sadā-s'iva, manifesting himself in the Maṇi-pūra as a winter-cloud and shining there with his spouse of the form of resplendent lightning. A chapter in the Taittirīyāraṇyaka, wherein is given a detailed description of the origin of the Sun, Moon and Fire and also of the stars and other luminaries making days and nights, all from water, is quoted from. Therein the essence of water—nectar, is referred to as pervading the disc of the Sun, and the Yogin is represented as apostrophizing to the water of the Maṇi-pūra, asking for “the essence of that essence, which is of the highest order”. The essence of water is explained to be the Moon. From the Ap-tattva of the Maṇi-pūra, the Yogin desires to get at the Moon, the fountain source of all nectar, which, flowing from the lunar disc, passes on to the disc of the Sun, which it nourishes, as long as it flows. As the place of the Moon, the Baindava-sthāna, is in the Sahasrāra, the essence of the highest order is the nectar oozing out of the Sahasrāra and filling up all the Nāḍi-s. A quotation from the Yajurveda (I, v, 11) deals with the crossing of the ocean of Samsāra in strongly built, well-designed and equipped boats, which could withstand the severest hurricanes and storms, wherewith the Yogin could attain Salvation. These boats are said to be comprised, in the Srī-vidyā, one of Fire in the Svādhiṣṭhāna, another of Earth in the Mūlādhāra, another of Ether in the Visuddhi, another of Mind in the Ājñā, another of Air in the An-āhata, and yet another of Water in the Maṇi-pūra.

I conceive, in Thy Mūlādhāra, the Deity dancing the great Tāṇḍava, replete with the nine sentiments, along with Samayā intent upon Lāsya, as Navātman. This world came to own its father and mother in these two, with their manifest grace for the act of Creation.

The names of the deities to be meditated upon in this Cakra are Ādi-naṭa and Lās'yes'vari, surrounded by the fifty-six Pārthiva (Earthly) Mayūkha-s.³

Samayā—the Devī that attains similarity with Śiva in Adhiṣṭhāna. Avasthāna, Anuṣṭhāna, Rūpa and Nāman. Similarly, the term 'Samaya', when applied to Śiva, should be construed as Īśvara who attains similarity with the Devī in the above respects. The doctrine relating to the worship of Samaya and Samayā is known as Samaya-mata. When the Ādi-naṭa and the Lāsyas'varī, engaged in Tāṇḍava and Lāsyā respectively, catch a glimpse of each other, the world is said to originate from them. When the Tāṇḍava and Lāsyā cease, the world ceases to exist. This is the Kaula-doctrine. As the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhiṣṭhāna both belong to the region of darkness, the external worship of the Devī in those Cakra-s is countenanced exclusively by the Kaula-s; even though the Samaya-s have nothing to do with such form of worship, still they may worship the Devī of the Sahasrāra mentally as having her place in these two gross Cakra-s, in keeping with their own doctrine. It is with a view to stressing this feature that the Devī has been designated significantly as Samayā in this and the previous stanza but one, which deal with the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhiṣṭhāna, which belong exclusively to the province of the Kaula-s. According to the Kaula-mārga, the Bindu is in the Tri-koṇa of the Mūlā-dhāra. Hence the Kaula-s worship the Bindu in the Tri-koṇa every day. That Tri-koṇa is of two kinds: one is situated in the middle of the nine Yoni-s of the Srī-cakra and the other in the organ of a beautiful young woman. The Pūrva-kaula-s worship the former painted or engraved in the Bhūrja leaf, gold plate, a piece of silk-cloth or on a platform. The Uttara-kaula-s worship the actual organ of the damsel. These are exclusively external in form and not internal, and as such their worship pertains only to the Mūlādhāra-cakra. The Kuṇḍalinī therein is known as Kaulinī. The worship of the Tri-koṇa pointing downwards therefore amounts to the worship of the Kaulinī of the form of Bindu. She is given to sleeping always and is therefore worshipped, while she is asleep. When she is roused from her sleep, that constitutes the Liberation for the Kaula-s. She is propitiated with liquor, flesh, fish, etc., mnemonically grouped as the Pañca-makāra-s. As these and the similarly degenerate practices of the Dig-ambara-s and Kṣapaṇaka-s are not countenanced by the Veda-s, they should be considered reprehensible.

According to the Samaya form, the six Cakra-s of the Srī-cakra are identical with the six Cakra-s of the human body. The original Tri-koṇa, with which we began to design the Ṣaṭ-koṇa of the Srī-cakra, is reputed to be the Baindava-sthāna. That is in effect a quadrilateral. We have already seen how this quadrilateral, which contains the Baindava-sthāna, is no other than the disc of the Moon in the thousand-petalled lotus. It is this Baindava-sthāna that is otherwise known as 'Sudhā-sindhu' and 'Saragha'. Hence, neither the external worship of the Baindava-sthāna of the Pūrva-kaula-s, nor the degenerate practices of the Uttara-kaula-s can even be remotely meant by or associated with the Samaya form of worship of the Tri-koṇa. The worship of the Samaya-Samayā-conjunction in the Sahasrāra is alone the goal of the Samayin-s. The similarity between the Deva and the Devī in all the five respects is indicated in this stanza. The identity of abode is established by the words 'Tavādhāre', meaning that the Deities have their abode in the Mūlādhāra of the Devī. The Lāsya or female-dance and the Tāṇḍava or male-dance, both being types of the same Nṛtya, their identity of Avasthā or condition is established. The words 'Udaya-vidhim uddisya' establish the identity of Anuṣṭhāna or occupation, both of them being intent on the same purpose, viz., the creation of the world. The identities of form and name between the two are established by the word 'Navātman' occurring in this stanza, as further amplified by the same word occurring in stanza 34. Similarly in the five other stanzas preceding this, wherein the two deities are conceived as placed in the middle of the other five Cakra-s, their identity in these five respects may be established from a careful examination of the stanzas.

For the Samayin-s the worship of the six Cakra-s is not essential, while that of the Sahasrāra is the sine qua non of their doctrine, which consists in the conceiving of the form of the disc of the Moon in the middle of the Sahasrāra as the quadrilateral, which is the seat of the Bindu, and the Bindu therein as the Sādākhyā transcending the twenty-five Tattva-s, as it is the twenty-sixth Tattva of the form of the conjunction of the S'akti with Sadā-s'iva. When the Samaya form of worship does not countenance external forms, it is needless to point out that observances, such as the sixteen kinds of Upacāra-s, are beyond the province of such worship. The identity between the six Cakra-s of the body, (such as the Mūlādhāra and others), with the six Cakra-s of the S'rī-cakra, (such as Tri-koṇa and others), that between the quadrilateral containing the Bindu of the S'rī-cakra and the Sahasrāra, similarly that between the Bindu and S'iva, as also that between the S'rī-cakra in its entirety and the Pañca-das'ākṣari, these four kinds of identities are looked upon as forming the essential features of the Samaya form of worship.

Some are of the opinion that there are six kinds of identities. The Parā, one of the four divisions of Nāda, is of the form of the Tri-koṇa which does not contain the Bindu. Of the other three divisions of the Nāda, Paśyanti is of the form of the Aṣṭa-koṇa of the S'rī-cakra; while the Madhyamā is of the form of the two Das'āra-s, and the Vaikharī of the Catur-das'āra. The S'iva-cakra-s, consisting of the two lotuses, the Mekhalā-traya and the Bhū-gṛha, are inherent in the S'akti-cakra-s detailed above. Hence the S'rī-cakra is implied in the term Nāda. The six Cakra-s, Mūlādhāra and others of the body, are implied in the term 'Bindu'. The Kalā-s, which may be taken either as fifty or three-hundred and sixty in number, and are comprehended in the five elements and the Manas-tattva, are far below the twenty-sixth Tattva. Hence the Bhaga-vatī stands far above the Nāda, the Bindu and the Kalā. The Sahasrāra is beyond the Bindu of the six Cakra-s and is of the character of the Baindava-sthāna, the same as the Sudhā-sindhu and described also as Saraghā in the Veda. The Tattva beyond the Nāda is the Sādākhyā the same as the Śrī-vidyā or the Brahma-vidyā and described by the term Cit-kalā, transcending the fifteen Kalā-s, Darsā, Dr̥ṣṭā, Darsatā and others, of the form of the fifteen syllables 'Ka E Ī La Harim' and others, having as their names Trī-pura-sundarī and others. The six identities referred to are the identities between the permutations of Nāda, Bindu and Kalā, taken two at a time. By worshipping the Devī with the conception of the six identities referred to above, the practitioner becomes dissolved in the Sādākhyā-kalā. It is only after this, that, through the power acquired by meditation on the Devī, having in view the six identities, and the power of Mahā-vedha obtained, by the grace of the Guru, the Bhaga-vatī suddenly bursts through the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhīsthāna centres of energy and manifests herself directly in the Maṇi-pūra. The manner in which the Mahā-vedha is acquired is as follows: Having at first, during the practising stage, got access to the Mahā-vidyā from the Guru in whose custody alone it is, and received instruction only from the mouth of the Guru, practising the mere muttering of the Mantra in the manner indicated by the Guru, he should at the hour of midnight, on the Aṣṭamī Tithi known as the Mahā-navamī, in the bright half of the Āśva-yuja month, catch hold of the feet of his Guru. As a result of that, due to the contact of the Guru's hand placed on the crest of the disciple and the imparting once again by him of the Mantra, the procedure to be adopted for the worship of the six Cakra-s, and the manner in which the six kinds of identities are to be experienced by the disciple, there originates the power known as Saiva-mahā-vedha, whereby the practitioner realizes the manifestation of the Sādākhyā. When once the Mahā-vedha is generated in the practitioner, the Bhaga-vatī manifests herself in the Maṇi-pūra. Commencing from Arghya, Pādya and the like and till the offering of jewels set with gems, all the details of worship should be followed with due realization of the Kuṇḍalinī in the Maṇi-pūra, and the Devī should thence be transposed to the An-āhata chamber of the heart, where offerings, from Dhūpa onward till the offering of food and water for cleansing, should be made, and thereafter in the Visuddhi she should be enthroned. While she is engaged in conversation with her comrades there, she should be worshipped with the crystal-like sixteen Kalā-s of the Moon there, as with so many gems and transposed to the Ājñā-cakra, where she, the Kames'varī, should be propitiated by means of various kinds of waving of lights. Thereafter, suddenly, like a streak of lightning, she flashes into the thousand-petalled lotus and, having entered that region, frolics in the company of Sadā-s'iva, in the pleasure-garden, under the shadow of the Kalpaka trees in Maṇi-dvīpa, in the middle of the ocean of nectar. Just then the screen should be dropped, and the practitioner should stand all alone till the Devī makes her exit therefrom on her way back to the Mūlādhāra.

The view of S'aṅkara-bhagavat-pāda, as could be inferred from his description of the Devī in 'Kvaṇat-kāncī-dā mā' (St. 7) and others, is that the Devī manifests herself in the Maṇi-pūra of the practitioner after his realizing the four kinds of identity. The other view, that the manifestation is the result of the six kinds of identity being realized by the practitioner, is Lakṣmīdhara's.

Hence the only means open to a Samayin to achieve his objects successful, in this as well as in the other world, is the internal form of worship and the internal form of worship alone.

Having thus far described the Bliss derived by meditation on the Devī in her various aspects, in detail, with a view to acquainting the worshippers, who are not fortunately circumstanced to meditate upon her in the requisite manner, with the grace and charms of her form, from head to foot, the author of this work has devoted for that purpose the rest of the stanzas composing it, known as the Saundarya-laharī, " the flood of beauty ",

as opposed to the Ānanda-laharī, the prior portion of the work, so known because of the flood of spiritual Bliss wherein her votaries find themselves merged on going through it. However, this differentiation is not recognized by Lakṣmī-dhara, Bhāskara-rāya, Kaivalyās'rama and other learned commentators, who call the entire work the Saundarya-laharī. With a view to singing the praises of the Devī, whose pair of feet stand far above the three hundred and sixty rays emanating from them (as described in stanza 14) the author sets about describing her form from her crown down to her toes. The twelve Suns—the original word 'Gagana-maṇibhiḥ' literally means 'the sky-gems'; hence the Suns which are twelve in number. Sunāsīra—Indra. According to Kaivalyās'rama, the Kiriṭa-mantra 'Hiraṇya-kiriṭāya sahasrāditya-tejase namaḥ', "Salutation to the golden crown dazzling with the lustre of a thousand Suns", is derived from this stanza describing the Devī's crown.

O Spouse of Śiva ! may Thy lock of hair, which resembles an expanse of blue lilies in bloom and which is thick, shining and soft, drive away our (internal) darkness. I take it the flowers of the trees of the garden of the slayer of Vala, take up their abode in this (lock) (as though) to acquire its inherent fragrance.

The Devī's dark locks reflected on the heart of the meditating votary have the miraculous power of driving away the darkness therefrom.

This enhances the greatness of the Devī to a remarkable extent.

The slayer of Vala—

Indra, who is reputed to have killed Balāsura.

The form 'Vala', which, by the way, accentuates the effect of alliteration, is prevalent in South India, being the same as 'Bala'. The trees referred to are Kalpa trees and the garden is Nandana. Again, it is usual for women to wear flowers for adding fragrance to and enhancing the beauty of their locks; but in the case of the Devī, as the poet puts it, it is just the reverse.

May the parting line of the hair over Thy forehead, which verily marks the track taken by the surging flood of beauty of Thy face and which bears the vermilion streak, resembling a beam of the newly rising Sun held in bondage by adversary hordes, viz., the immensely powerful elements of darkness in (the form of Thy) locks of hair, vouchsafe our welfare.

The language is hyperbolic and presents poetic imagery of a high order. This stanza is also read with its former and latter halves changing places. The reading adopted by us is the one which is quoted by Appayya Dīkṣita in his Kuvala-yānanda.

Surrounded by curly hair resembling (swarms of) young bees, Thy face scoffs at the beauty of the lotus-flower; in which face, smiling gently, rendered handsome by the filament-like brilliance of the teeth and endowed with fragrance, the bees of the eyes of the Destroyer of Smara revel.

The destroyer of Smara—Siva. Young bees—

'Kalabha' the Samskr̥t word is generally used to signify the young one of an elephant. Here it is used to indicate the young one of a bee.

I fancy, Thy forehead, which shines bright and clear in the effulgence of its beauty, is a second crescent fixed on to (Thy) crown. For, the two, by being placed invertedly (one above the other) and by blending together, turn out to be the Full-moon besmeared with the balm of nectar.

Besmeared with the balm of nectar—there is a pun on the Samskr̥t equivalent of this phrase which also means “cemented together with a coating of plaster”. The idea is that the two crescents, by being placed in such a manner as to make their horns meet together, form themselves into the Full-moon, the flow of Sudhā from both of them completing the cementing process.

The underlying idea is this: the Devī with her slightly knit eyebrows demonstrates, as it were, her sole purpose of dispelling fear from the hearts of her countless votaries, as, when she is in that posture, the eyebrows assume the form of a bow readily strung.

All glory to it!

The glance of the Devī's eyes is said to be of an eight-fold character, each one of which is represented to indicate the name of a great city. These eight kinds of glances are common to all women. The glance known as Viśālā is said to bloom inward; that known as Kalyāṇī is said to be filled with surprise; the A-yodhyā-glance represents one with the expanded pupil; the Dhārā-glance denotes idleness; the Madhurā-glance is that which shows a slight swirl; the Bhoga-vatī is the friendly one; Avantī is the one of an innocent nature; and Vijayā is the oblique one. The Devī's glances produce respectively the following effects: agitation, attraction, melting, infatuation, subjugation, exorcising, antagonizing and death-dealing.

the Sages say that the world has (its) dissolution and genesis with the closing and opening bereft of winking, with a view to save from dissolution this entire universe, which had its origin in the opening of Thine eyes.

O Aparṇā! the (glittering) S'apharikā fish ever hide themselves under water without winking, afraid of the tell-tale nature of Thine eyes, which are so close to Thine ears. The Goddess of Beauty, again, leaves the blue-lily at daybreak, when its doorlike petals close, and forces an entrance (into it) at nightfall.

The Devī's eyes resemble both the S'apharikā fish and the blue-lily. The poet weaves out of his imagination the situation so cleverly portrayed in this stanza.

 The aquatic asylum sought by the fish, which are ever awake, is said to be due to their 'fear, lest their rivals, the Devī's eyes, which are so close to her ears, should carry any tales against them.

Similarly the lilies lose their beauty at daybreak, when their petals close, and bloom with the fullness of their beauty at nightfall, when the Devī's eyes, being closed in sleep, would not outshine the beauty of the lilies.

glistening cheeks, I fancy to be the four-wheeled chariot of Manmatha, mounted on which, Māra, the valiant warrior that he is, confronts the Lord of the Pramatha (hosts) who (once) got ready (for battle, mounted on) the Earth-chariot with the Sun and the Moon as its wheels.

* The comparison of the Devī's face to a four-wheeled chariot is realistic, the face being the body of the chariot, and the two Tāṭaṅka-s, ear-rings, suspended from the ear-lobes, and their reflected images cast on her cheeks forming the four chariot-wheels. The implication is that Manmatha, taking advantage of the beauty of the Devī's face, used it as his chariot and not only challenged the redoubtable field-marshal of the Pramatha-gaṇa-s, who using the Earth itself as his chariot, mounted on the Sun and the Moon as its wheels, once confronted the three Pura-s, but also vanquished him with the adventitious aid of the Devī's beauty. Kaivalyās'rama suggests that 'Āsṛitya' would be a better reading for 'Āruhya', remarking that it would be highly improper to conceive of Manmatha mounting on the Devī's countenance.

O Consort of Ś'arva ! while Thou hast been continuously drinking in, with the hollow of Thine outstretched ears, the sweet words of the goddess Sarasvatī, which keep far in the background the flood of nectar, and been shaking Thy head by way of appreciating the merit (of the composition), Thy various ear-ornaments echo in unison, as it were, with loud chimes.

The sweet words of the goddess Sarasvatī—in praise of the Devī. The implication is that the goddess of learning, in her attempt to please her patron and win her approbation, had produced such an exquisitely beautiful composition, wherein she had risen to the exalted heights of the art of Poesy, her own field, as to have wrung from the Devī an appreciation indicated by the involuntary shaking of her head ; not mērely that, but also the Devi's ear-ornaments, inanimate though they were, chimed in unison with their mistress's thoughts, as if touched by the description of their mistress's greatness.

Lakṣmī-dhara construes the stanza in a different manner altogether, taking the sweet words as coming from the mouth of the Devī herself, on hearing which Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning, is so much over-powered by their grace, as to express her approbation by shaking her head, when her ear-ornaments also chime in unison. Lakṣmī-dhara takes the last word 'Te' in the stanza as applying to 'Sūktīḥ', ignoring the proximity of the word, 'Sarasvatyāḥ', which immediately precedes it. While, therefore, the natural arrangement of the words in the stanza support our rendering given above, it must be admitted, in Lakṣmī-dhara's defence, that the very design of the author in describing the Devī from head to foot, in the latter part of the poem lends support to Lakṣmī-dhara's interpretation, as this stanza is ostensibly in praise of the 'Vāg-jharī', sweet flow of words of the Devī, and does not pertain to the proficiency of Sarasvatī in her art, as it is not germane to the topic of this part of the poem. Adopting the same line of argument, it may be noted that the position, assumed by the other commentators and followed by us in our rendering, is strengthened, as the description by the poet of the Devi's shaking of her head in appreciation of Sarasvatī's Vāg-jharī comes within the design adopted by the author in the latter part of the poem, such description being only of the Devi's face.

fruit. Bearing in its (hollow) interior pearls, kept in their places by Thy very cool breath, it wears a pearl outside also, there being an abundance of them (pearls therein).

Flag—Here is a clever metaphorical reference made by the poet to the Devī, the daughter of Himavat, she being represented by implication as the flag conspicuously floating at the top of the dynasty of Himavat which is represented to be the bamboo-staff on which flag floats.

Staff—note the pun on the original word 'Vamśa', which means 'bamboo', as well as 'dynasty'. Here the Devī's nose is compared to the bamboo, which encloses a hollow within and which, according to the tradition obtaining among Saṃskṛt writers, is described as producing pearls. The cherished fruit—ostensibly the pearl of the bamboo, but really the Kaivalya sought from the Devī. The fact that the Devī's nose wears as an ornament a pearl outside, is taken advantage of by the poet, who represents it as one of the pearls in the hollow of the bamboo-like nose, cast by the exhaling breath of the Devī and forming an index, as it were, to the pearls inside. Lakṣmī-dhara adopts the following reading: "Vahaty antar muktāḥ sisīra-kara-nisvāsa-galitaṃ samṛddhyā yat tāsāṃ bahir api ca muktā-maṇi-dharaḥ", and takes 'Sīsīrakara', which means 'the Moon', as indicating the breath passing through the left (Idā) Nāḍī, wherein, according to Yoga-sāstra, the Moon functions. Then he construes

the compound word 'Muktā-maṇi-dharaḥ' as 'Muktā-manuṃ dhṛtavān', and not satisfied with this, suggests as a better reading,

'Muktā - maṇi m adhāt'. In that case the latter half would mean: "It bears pearls in its (hollow) interior and hence wears a pearl outside also, cast as it were by the lunar (left nostril) breath,

there being an abundance of them (pearls therein)."
Herein is reference to the South Indian custom of boring a hole through the left side of the nose of women, so as to attach an ornament with a pearl pendant.

O (Goddess) with beautiful (rows of) teeth !
 I shall presently name what equals the lustre of Thy naturally red lips. Let the coral-creeper bear fruit. It is not the Bimba fruit.
 Having turned red because of the redness caused by the reflection of Thy form, how will it not feel ashamed to be weighed in the balance, even to the slightest extent ?

Having described the nose of the Devī, the poet next proceeds to describe her lips, but finds himself baffled in calling to mind any object in nature, which, like the Devī's body, from head to foot, is of a naturally red colour and, at the same, time, has a part redder still, corresponding to her lips. In the first flush, he lands on the coral creeper, which is of a similar hue, root and branch, and as he could not conceive of any part of it comparable to the Devī's lips, he fancies that, possibly, when the creeper bears fruit, the latter might be redder still and on that account resemble the Devī's lips. But as he has not heard of or seen the coral fruit, he pauses and is forced to say, 'Let the coral-creeper bear fruit'. Then he lights on the Bimba fruit, as an alternative, but has to reject that also, for the reasons stated in the stanza. The reading 'Dṛg-bimba-pratiphalana' means, "caused by the reflection of the Sun (one of the Devī's eyes) thereon", the underlying idea being apparently that the Bimba fruit has its colour turned to red, only as it ripens under the influence of the Sun's rays; while the reading 'Tad-bimba, etc.,' means "caused by the reflection of the lips themselves", the word 'Tad' indicating 'Dantac-chada', i.e., lips. How will it not feel ashamed, etc.?—as the Bimba fruit does not make the slightest approach in point of colour to the Devī's lips, it is bound to feel ashamed at the very suggestion that it should stand such a comparison.

often associated with the company of women.

O Mother ! the region of Thy breasts wears a creeper-like lucid garland, strung with pearls from the skull of Stambe-rama-danu-ja, its natural lustre variegated with the reflected lustre of Thy Bimba lips, (thus) resembling the fame of the vanquisher of the (three) Pura-s intermixed with his valour.

Skull of Stambe-rama-danu-ja—i.e., of Gajāśura, a demon in the form of an elephant, said to have been vanquished by Śiva, who, to mark his victory over him, wore his hide as a garment. Pearls of various colours, according to tradition, are said to be found in the skull of an elephant, the hollow of a bamboo, the hood of a snake, the cloud, the sugarcane and the pearl-oyster. The pearls obtained from the skull of Gajāśura are worn by the Devī as a trophy round her neck. Again, fame is described by poets as of a white colour and valour as of a red colour. Hence the comparison between the pearl-necklace of the Devī tinged with the red lustre of her lips and the fame and valour of her Lord.

O Daughter of the Mountain ! I fancy that the ocean of the milk of poesy rising out of Thy heart verily causes the milk of Thy breasts to flow, on swallowing which (milk) given by Thee with grace, the Dravidian child became the poet-laureate among great poets.

Thy heart—the Devi's heart is here represented to contain the ocean of the milk of poesy, which ebbs and flows there. During spring-tide the milk of poesy overflows and mixes with the milk of her breasts. No wonder that the Dravidian child, nursed on such milk coupled with the Devi's grace, developed poetic talent of a high order.

Regarding the identity of the Infant Prodigy, the Dravida-s'is'u here referred to, there are various versions. Lakṣmī-dhara, Kaivalyāśrama and others maintain that the reference is to S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda himself. The story is, according to Kaivalyāśrama, as follows: S'aṃkarā's father, who was a pious devotee of the Devī, would never fail to visit the local temple every day and, after bathing the Devī with milk and making Pūjā, was in the habit of returning home with a small quantity of Nirmālya milk on which his little child was fed every day. When he had to be temporarily absent from his village, he left instructions with his wife that the Pūjā should be performed by her as usual during his absence. She was carrying out her husband's mandate, but as she had to keep aloof during her menstrual period, she directed her child, the infant S'aṃkara, to go to the temple and perform Pūjā in her stead. The child, in his simplicity, was under the impression that the milk was intended to be drunk by the Devī and felt surprised that the Devī would not partake of it. When at the importunity of the child, the Devī drank all the milk, he burst into tears and called upon her to return to him the usual quantity intended for his use. The Devī, out of compassion, suckled the child, whereupon it burst into rhapsodies of praise and returned home, singing songs which automatically came out of his mouth. Just then the child's father returned from his journey and greeted him with inexpressible joy. The Devī soon appeared to the father in a dream and prophesied a remarkable career for the child blessed by her breast-feeding.

Kāmes'vara-sūri, after narrating the above, gives another version of it, adding that that version was current at Kāñcī and its neighbourhood in his days. In this version the father, who is very poor, is out on his begging excursion, while the mother is away fetching water from the river, and the child, suddenly waking in his cradle, cries for milk. Pārvatī and Parameś'vara, who happen just then to pass that way in their Ākāś'a-yāna, hear the appealing cries of the infant and hie thither, when Pārvatī takes the child in her arms and suckles him out of compassion. The rest of the story is the same as the previous one.

There is yet another account given in the Malayālam edition of Saundarya-laharī by Kanṭiyūr Mahā-deva Sāstrin, in his commentary on the forty-first stanza, i.e., the last of the Ānanda-laharī portion. According to this version, the entire work was of a Siddha of the name of Draviḍa-s'is'u, who had it inscribed on the slopes of Mount Kailāsa, and when S'aṃkara-bhagavat-pāda paid a visit to the Mount as a pilgrim and was reading the work, the Devī called the attention of the Siddha thereto and commanded him to wipe off the work as it contained profound secrets not to be revealed to mortals. Even before the Siddha carried out the said command, S'aṃkara was able to commit to memory forty-one stanzas at random out of the hundred. Before he could memorize the rest, the entire work had been cleanly wiped off by the Siddha. On his return home S'aṃkara wrote out from memory the forty-one stanzas, which now form the first part of the work, and composed the other stanzas requisite to make up the one hundred. The difference in the style and theme between the two parts is given out as a reason for credence being attached to this story of the authorship of the work. Draviḍa-s'is'u's marvellous powers of word-portraiture are ascribed in this story to his having been fed on the Devī's milk. Mahā-deva Sāstrin gives this story for what it is worth and does not express any opinion of his own on its authenticity.

Another commentator, the author of Sudhā-vidyotinī, says that the Dramiḍa-s'is'u referred to is one Pravara-sena, son of Dramiḍa, a Kṣatriya prince of the Dramiḍa country. This commentator, whose name cannot be traced, says that he is the son of Pravara-sena and claims that the account given by him is authentic, as it is based on the direct testimony of the Dramiḍa-s'is'u himself, i.e., his father, the child of Dramiḍa. The story is that Dramiḍa, as soon as Pravara-sena was born, was advised by his minister Śuka that the birth of the son was an evil portent for his family, and should the child be allowed to survive, he would lose his kingdom. The king ordered his men to abandon the child in the neighbouring hill-tracts. A tiger carried the child to its cavern and left him at its mouth taking him to be a bundle of gems. The child soon became reminiscent of his Yogic powers acquired during his previous birth and began to praise the Devī, who, taking pity on the child, nursed him. Some time thereafter the child was rescued by a party of hunters and restored to the throne.

Yet others look upon Śrī Jñāna-saṃbandha as the Draviḍa-siṣu. This is one of the four reputed Tamil Saints, (the others being Appa, Sundara, and Mānikya-vācaka) who are the authors of several hymns in praise of Śiva, and are almost deified throughout the Tamil country. Śrī Jñāna-saṃbandha is said to be a native of Shiyālī. His father, Śiva-pāda-hṛdaya, and his mother, Bhaga-vatī, were pious Brāhmaṇa-s, ever devoted to the worship of the God presiding over the local Śiva temple. By the Lord's grace a child was born to them after a long penance. One day, when this child was about three years old, he was taken to the temple-tank by Śiva-pāda-hṛdaya, who leaving him on the Ghat, went to bathe in the tank. The child, left alone in an unfamiliar environment, soon began to cry, calling out "Mother! Father!" This touched the heart of the Lord Śiva of the temple, who at once asked his spouse to take the child and feed him with her milk. The child was soon appeased and stood there with milk flowing out of his mouth. On noticing this, the father, who returned after bathing, questioned him as to who had suckled him. Whereupon the child burst forth with a song in praise of Śiva, and became later in life one of the recognized bards of Tamil Hymns. Śrī Jñāna-saṃbandha is said to have flourished about twelve centuries ago and was hence possibly a contemporary of Śaṅkara-bhagavat-pāda.

It has to be noted, however, that the two stories narrated here, which have a direct bearing on Śaṅkara-bhagavat-pāda as the Draviḍa-siṣu, are not borne out by any accounts of Śrī Śaṅkārācārya's life and times, and the fact that S'aṃkārācārya would not have given such a high testimonial to himself as indicated by the last line of the stanza, but would probably have couched a reference to his capacity as a poet in much milder language, militates against the position taken by Lakṣmī-dhara and others.

Manasi-jā—Manmatha, the god of love. Here the popular notion that flame, when quenched, will send up smoke, is effectively made use of by the poet. The allusion is to the burning of Manmatha by Hara, when the former tried to rouse the passion of the latter.

Something—the Romāvalī. Kālindī—the daughter of Mount Kalinda, i.e., the J u m n a, whose water is represented 'to be of a dark colour. Ether—is also represented as dark in colour. This stanza also describes the Romāvalī of the Devī. The Ether, when pressed, is represented as seeking shelter in the navel.

Fragile bank—likely to give way at any moment, carrying the tree thereon along with it. The condition of the Devi's waist is similarly precarious, as it might apparently give way (owing to the weight of the two breasts above) at its weak spots. viz., the navel and the folds. The optative form is significant, as the votary finds no one directly to appeal to.

Jealous of the Kaṅkeli—the Kaṅkeli is a tree which, according to tradition, when barren, blossoms only when kicked by the tender feet of women of the highest class, known as Padminī-s. Śīva is represented here as envying the barren Kaṅkeli tree in the Devī's garden, for the exclusive privilege, which it enjoys, of receiving kicks, from its mistress's feet. In other words, he wishes very much that some of them be administered to himself.

The poet creates, out of his imagination, an amorous interval, where in S'iva is represented as being found out by his spouse, when, in jest, he calls her by a wrong name, the implication being that the Devi scents therein his amour with some other woman and punishes him therefore with a kick. Manmatha, who was only waiting for an opportunity for venting his spleen on his enemy S'iva, by seeing him lowered in esteem, uses the jingling of the anklet as a sign of his triumph over S'iva. It may also be noted that, in this stanza, the poet creates an opportunity cleverly enough for the Lord to receive the kick he so much longed for, as shown in the previous stanza, by creating a situation as depicted here, viz., the blunder of using a wrong name.

 ing their grace on their devotees, have outdone the lotus-flower, which easily blights with snow-fall, sleeps during night and only slightly attains Lakṣmī's grace ?

It is usual for poets to compare the Devi's feet to the lotus flower. In this stanza the poet tries to show the fallacy as it were, lurking in such a comparison, as it is only in one respect, and that too only slightly, that such cannot be touched by danger (of any kind), and which was somehow lifted at the time of (Thy) marriage by the vanquisher of the (three) Pura-s, with a soft heart, and placed on a stone, has been made a peer of the hard tortoise-shell by great poets ?

Here the poet calls into question the propriety of comparing the forepart of the Devī's foot, which has become reputed as the bestower of the ends and aims of existence and as warding off all danger, to a hard tortoise-shell, which does little credit to the artistic skill of great poets. There is also a reading "Katham vā, etc.", when the meaning would be : "How did S'iva manage to lift, etc. ?" implying thereby that S'iva was light-hearted enough to do the wrong thing by placing the Devī's soft feet on a hard piece of flint. Kaivalyās'rama remarks in his gloss on this stanza : "This Stanza is not in accord with S'aṃkarācārya's S'aṃpradāya, as it is not found either in the Malayālam manuscript or in the South Indian manuscripts." But Arthur Avalon, in his Introduction to his edition of Ānanda-laharī, quotes this remark and applies it to stanza 99, apparently by mistake.

O Caṇḍī ! Thy two feet, which lavish plenty of wealth at all times and at once, on the poor, laugh as it were with their toe-nails, which resemble (so many) moons causing the closing of the lotus-like hands of celestial women, at the Kalpaka trees which give their fruit exclusively to the denizens of the celestial world, with their finger-like sprouts.

The Devī's feet, which have the quality of bestowing plenty on the needy at all times and at once, are made by the poet to laugh at Kalpaka trees, which, notwithstanding their much talked of pretensions as regards granting boons to all, after all grant the desires of people above want (the Svastha-s). There is a play on the word

'Svastha-s', which means (1) who are above want, and

(2) who are celestial. Again, the crescent-like toenails, which are so many moons, extort the homage of celestial women, as their hands, which resemble the lotus-flower, are forced to be closed in veneration, on their approaching the Devi's feet, which contain many moons.

May my soul attain the quality of a six-footed (bee), with the (six) senses as its feet, by immersing in this, Thy foot, which is ever giving to the helpless, wealth in proportion to their desire, scattering abundant honey in the form of a flood of beauty, and which is auspicious as a cluster of Mandāra flowers.

In this stanza the poet compares the Devi's feet to a cluster of Mandāra flowers, in point of auspiciousness, scattering of honey and beauty and the bestowing of wealth on the needy, and the soul of the votary possessed of the six senses to a six-footed bee. The underlying idea is: The votary prays that his mind be ever absorbed in meditating on the Devi's feet.

The Devī's beautiful gait is represented by the poet as imparting instruction to her household swans, who themselves have a graceful gait.

Thy servants, Druhiṇa, Hari, Rudra and Īsvara, have become Thy cot. Śiva with His imaginary bedsheet of a transparent hue, (Himself) tinged red with Thy lustre reflected therein, yields pleasure to Thine eyes, assuming as it were the form of erotic sentiment incarnate.

Druhiṇa, Hari, Rudra and Īsvara—the four agents inherent in the Sadā-s'iva-tattva. The six Cakra-mansions commencing from the Mūlādhāra and ending with the Ājñā, representing respectively Earth, Fire, Water, Air and Ether in their subtle and gross forms, and Manas, as also the ten organs of sense, contain the twenty-one Tattva-s. Thus these twenty-one Tattva-s are contained in and constitute the six Cakra-s. The four Tattva-s standing above them, viz., Māyā, S'uddha-vidyā, Mahesvara and Sadā-s'iva, take their rest on the four doors of the triad of quadrangles, known as Bhū-pura, in their order commencing from the door facing the East, on the other side of the Brahma-granthi. The four Tattva-s so situated are the four legs of the cot.

As Suddha-vidyā bears affinity to Sadā-sīva, the latter is overshadowed by the former and on that account becomes identical with it. Sīva and the Śakti have their conjunction in the Baṇḍava-sihāna, otherwise described as 'Sudhā-sindhu' and 'Saraghā', in the middle of the S'ri-cakra with the four doors, of the form of the pericarp of the Sahasra-dala-kamala.

The Sun, having attained the position of a mirror (cut out) of crystal for Thy feet, rendered him with his beams withdrawn for fear of (burning) Thy face, reflects Thy face, as it were, viz., his own heart-lotus, which, by no means troubled by the Moon, is ever in bloom.

According to Lakṣmī-dhara stanzas 94, 99 and 102 are interpolations. Hence they have not been dealt with in his gloss. The position of a mirror for Thy feet—standing there as he does, for Pāda-sevā, the Sun being worthy of only such a position and not of facing Thee and directly serving the purpose of a mirror for thy face. By no means troubled by the Moon—as the presence of the Moon would not have the effect of closing its petals, it being overshadowed by the presence of the Devī. Lotuses generally bloom in sunlight and close their petals at nightfall. But the heart-lotus of the Sun, in the presence of the Devī, would be ever in bloom and thus resemble the Devī's lotus-like face in a way. There is the implication that the face of the Devī, reflected in the mirror of the Sun, causes an imprint of it, as it were, to appear in the heart of the Sun, which is all the while meditating upon the Devī.

The Moon is here compared to an emerald-canister containing musk and refined camphor for the daily use of the Devī. As the supply is exhausted every day, it is being replenished by Brahman, the Devī's servant, then and there. To bring about this effect the poet has artfully pitched upon the Moon with its waxing and waning as the Devī's toilet-canister and made the bright

Unattainable by the fickle-minded—not even the gods dare disturb the privacy of the Devi's home and face the Vanquisher of Pura-s there. How then can poor mortals even think of making an attempt to have a Dars'an of the Lord and his Lady in their bed-chamber? Sata-makha—the performer of a hundred sacrifices, i.e., Indra. The successful completion of a hundred sacrifices is believed to be rewarded with Indra's crown, according to tradition. Indra and other gods, by merely standing at the doorway of the harem, are credited with attaining psychic powers.

O Ideal of chastity ! how many poets have not courted the wife of Vidhātṛ ? Who does not become the lord of S'rī-devī (the goddess of wealth) by (commanding) whatever (little) wealth ? O foremost amongst the chaste ! saving the Great Lord (Mahā-deva), the embrace of Thy breast is unattainable even by the Kuravaka tree.

The wife of Vidhātṛ—the wife of Brahman, i.e.,

Sarasvati, the goddess of learning, at whose command is the gift of poesy and whose favour is therefore courted by poets.

Sri-devī—Lakṣmī, the goddess of wealth.
Wealth—in the form of hoards of precious metals, gems, coins, grain, elephants, horses and other emblems of prosperity. Even the possession of a little of one or more of the above evokes praise of the owner, as a Lakṣmi-pati, lord of wealth. The vein of levity assumed by the poet in his references to Sarasvatī and Lakṣmī as fickle-minded is for the purpose of heightening the effect of the Devi's chastity. Even the inanimate Kuravaka tree is denied the pleasure of the Devi's embrace, to be cured of its barrenness.

feet and is (thereby) rendered red with the lac-dye ; water, which assumes the quality of the chewed betel-juice, (spat out) of the mouth of Vāṇī, through enabling even deaf-mutes to become poets.

Here the marvellous qualities possessed by the washings of the Devī's feet in inducing even deaf-mutes to burst into hymns of praise of the Devī are indicated. Quality of the chewed betel—instances of devotees of the Goddesses of Learning blossoming into great poets by chewing the chewed betel-and-nut spat out of her mouth, or otherwise winning her favour, are not wanting according to tradition, e.g., Kālī-dāsa, the great lyric poet, Mūka, the author of the Mūka-pañca-s'atī, etc. This stanza is said to refer to the seeker in quest of Sāmīpya-mukti, liberation attained by proximity. Lakṣmi-dhara is of the opinion that this stanza extols the Samaya doctrine of worshipping the Devī in the Sahasrāra, the washings of whose feet are coveted by the seeker, and that the Kaula form of worship is not indicated, as in that case it cannot be maintained that the Devī in the form of the Kuṇḍalinī in the hollow of the Mūlādhāra has Carāṇa-s. He also seeks the support of stanza 10 to strengthen his contention, and says that the former half of that stanza refers to the Śamaya form and the latter half to the Kaula form of worshipping the Devī.

Thy devotee diverts himself with Sarasvatī and Lakṣmī, (i.e., becomes enlightened and opulent), and thus excites the jealousy of Vidhi and Hari, (their husbands); shatters Rati's chastity with his beautiful frame; and, endowed with long life, tastes the sweetness of what is called exquisite Bliss, bereft of the ignorance incidental to mortals.

Shatters—fascinates and thus renders her devotion to her lord inconstant. Taking this stanza as the penultimate one of the work, Lakṣmī-dhara says that this stanza indicates the worshipper's piercing through the six Cakra-s in order to reach the Sahasrāra. In substantiation of this view he proceeds thus: The Jīvan-mukta continues to function in the body out of sheer Vāṣanā, even after the removal of ignorance, even as the potter's wheel continues to whirl after the pot has been brought into shape completely. The Bhajana indicated in the last line is of two kinds: by the worshipping of the six Cakra-s and by Dhāraṇā. As regards the former, the first two Cakra-s, being in a region of darkness, are unworthy of being worshipped. The other five Cakra-s, including the Sahasrāra, alone are to be taken into account. Worshipers of the Maṇi-pūra attain the liberation known as Sārṣṭi, which consists in raising a city by the side of the Devī's city and abiding there, ever engaged in her service. Worshipers of the An-āhata attain liberation of the Sā-lokya type. Sā-lokya is residence in the Devī's city. Worshipers of the Viśuddhi attain liberation of the Sāmīpya type. Sāmīpya consists in ministering to the comforts of the Devī. Worshipers of the Ājñā attain liberation of the Sā-rūpya type. Sā-rūpya consists in attaining similarity of form with the Devī, which, however, being distinct and separate, is not Sā-yujya. The aforesaid four types of liberation are known as Gauṇa or accessory, for the reason that external torments alone are warded off in these types. Worshipers of the Sahasrāra alone have the privilege of attaining liberation of the Sā-yujya type, wherein even internal torments vanish, and which is therefore the ideal type of perpetual liberation referred to in the last line of the stanza.

After getting over all sorts of difficulties, the votary renders himself fit for attaining Sā-yujya. When Sā-yujya is reached he merges into the conjoint forms of Śiva and the Śakti. This is Kaivalya.

The identity of the six Cakra-s of the body, viz., the Mūlādhāra and others, with the six Cakra-s of the Srī-cakra, viz., the Tri-koṇa and others, has already been dealt with. The same also establishes the identity of the Nāda with the Bindu. The Nāda is the Śrī-cakra. The Bindu, as will be shown presently, is the group of six lotuses. The Mūlādhāra is of four petals. Its pericarp is the Tri-koṇa. The Svādhiṣṭhāna is of six petals. Its pericarp is the Aṣṭa-koṇa. The Maṇi-pūra is of ten petals. Its pericarp is the Antar-dasāra. The An-āhata is of twelve petals. Its pericarp is the Bahir-dasāra. The Viśuddhi is of sixteen petals. Its pericarp is the Catur-dasa-koṇa. Thus far the identity of the Śakti-cakra-s with the five Cakra-s of the body. The Ājñā is of two petals. Its pericarp is of two phases; the Aṣṭa-dala-padma is of one phase and the Ṣoḍaśa-dala-padma of the other phase. Of the three circles, one is of the character of the Rudra-granthi at the end of the Svādhiṣṭhāna, another is of the character of the Viṣṇu-granthi at the end of the An-āhata, and the third is of the character of the Brahma-granthi at the end of the Ājñā-cakra. Above these, the three quadrilaterals with the four doors have flights of steps at the four doors. This Bhū-gṛha is the pericarp of the Sahasra-dala-padma. There are a thousand petals to this lotus. The Baindava-sthāna is in the middle of the pericarp with the four doors. In this manner the identity of the Srī-cakra with the Kamala-s serving as palaces for the Devi may be seen. This identity, known as that of the Nāda with the Bindu, should be preserved as a profound secret and has to be divulged only by the Guru for the benefit of the disciple.

The inhering of the fifty Kalā-s in the six Cakra-s has already been dealt with. The vowels inhere in the lunar Khaṇḍa, the five Vargas from Ka to Ma in the solar Khaṇḍa, the rest excluding Ha and La in the Agni-khaṇḍa, and Ha and La in the Baindava, while Kṣa inheres in all. The inhering of the Kalā-s in the petals of the Mūlādhāra and other Cakra-s has likewise been already dealt with. From the above will be clearly seen the Tithi-character of the Kalā-s, the Kalā-character of the Nithyā-s, the character of the Kalā-s as inhering in the fifteen letters of the Mūla-mantra, the fifteen letters being of the character of the three Khaṇḍa-s, the three Khaṇḍa-s being of the Moon, Sun and Fire, the latter being of the character of the three Granthi-s, the three Granthi-s being of the character of the three Hrīm-s of the Mantra, the Hrīm being of the character of the Bhuvanes'varī-mantra, the Bhuvanes'varī-mantra being of the character of being included in the Mūla-mantra, the identity of the Mūla-mantra with the Srī-cakra, the nine Cakra-s of the same being identical with the six Cakra-s and the three Granthi-s as well as the pericarp of the thousand-petalled lotus of the human body. This alone establishes the identity of the Kalā with the Nāda.

With the Nāda is the Bindu identical, the Kalā with the Bindu, the Kalā with the Nāda, the Bindu with the Kalā, the Nāda with the Kalā and all these five with the Srī-vidyā. The five-fold nature of this identity should be understood from the precept of the Guru. Thus the six kinds of identity form the worship of the Devī. This means that the Goddess, viz., the Srī-vidyā with her ten forearms manifesting herself directly in the Maṇi-pūra, should be propitiated with the formalities of worship.

Now is described the real form of the Bindu. The Bindu is made up of the five Cakra-s commencing from the Mūlādhāra. It is the cause of the creation and the dissolution of the world and is the power wielded by Śiva. That alone is the Śakti-tattva of the character of the quadrilateral which is in the middle of the pericarp with four doors of the one-thousand-petalled lotus. The Śiva-tattva in the middle of this is the Nāda. Its four-fold character has already been explained. As both the Śakti and Śiva are of the form of the Śabda (word) and Artha (its significance), the character of the Kalā is common to them. Therefore their union transcends the Nāda, Bindu and Kalā. This is the secret of the Samaya doctrine.

This Bindu is divided into ten divisions, each one occupying the four petals of the Mūlādhāra and the six petals of the Svādhiṣṭhāna. The four divisions of the Bindu, on the four petals of the Mūlādhāra, are Manas, Buddhi, Ahaṃ-kāra and Citta of the character of matter, which are the cause of the creation of the universe. The six divisions of the Bindu on the six petals of the Svādhiṣṭhāna are Kāma (lust), Krodha (anger), Lobha (covetousness), Moha (delusion), Mada (infatuation) and Mātsarya (spite).

The Maṇi-pūra is of ten petals because of its being made up of the characteristics of the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhiṣṭhāna. Of the twelve petals of the An-āhāta, ten are of the character of the Maṇi-pūra and the two remaining petals represent the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhiṣṭhāna. Of the sixteen petals of the Viśuddhi, twelve represent the An-āhāta and four the Mūlādhāra, or ten of them represent the petals of the Maṇi-pūra and six the petals of the Svādhiṣṭhāna. The two petals of the Ājñā represent the two Cakra-s of the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhiṣṭhāna. Thus the four Cakra-s beginning from the Maṇi-pūra and ending with the Ājñā are based on the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhiṣṭhāna. As the four other Cakra-s inhere in the two Cakra-s, the Mūlādhāra and the Svādhiṣṭhāna, the ten-fold character of the One Bindu becomes established.

Even though the Kaula-s by, restricting their worship only to the first two Cakra-s, profess to attain the full fruits of worship, still, as the worship through the six identities is entirely absent in their form of worship, they cannot obtain the fruits of the several stages of the Samaya form of worship. The Samayin-s, on the other hand, even though they restrict their worship to the four Cakra-s above the first two, in effect attain the full fruits of the worship of all the six Cakra-s.

As for the other way of worship by Dhāraṇā-s; Dhāraṇā is the restraining of the vital air in the six Cakra-s by means of the Nāda and the Kalā. There are six kinds of Dhāraṇā-s, one in each of the six Cakra-s, and if the Sahasrāra is also included, the kinds of Dhāraṇā-s will be seven in all. At the rate of fifty Dhāraṇā-s in each Cakra, the total number will be $7 \times 50 = 350$. These, when severally combined with the Nāda, Bindu and Kalā and formed into permutations, will become infinite in number, and further light should be sought from the Guru thereon. The fruits of the Dhāraṇā-s as generated in the six Cakra-s are in order—Matī, Smṛti, Buddhi, Prajñā, Medhā, and Pratibhā (various grades of intellect). For further details reference is made by Lakṣmi-dhara to works such as the Subhagodaya, the Caraṇāgama, etc.

Reference has already been made to the Kaula practice of worship of the four-petalled Mūlādhāra inhering in the Svādhiṣṭhāna, as also to the doctrine of the Samayin-s, in accordance with which they worship the Devī that has reached the Maṇi-pūra, after bursting through the Svādhiṣṭhāna. One other point that may be noted in this connection is that the five Elements along with the Manas are established as identical with the six lotuses. Meditation on the identity of the Microcosm with the Macrocosm, the identity of the six lotuses, of the five kinds of similarities and the six kinds of identities, exercises so great an influence as to make the Microcosm manifest itself as the Macrocosm. This is the secret underlying all S'ās-tra-s bearing on Yoga, which enjoin on the Yogin to have recourse to the practice of such meditation with a view to his successful accomplishment of Yoga. This is also endorsed by the S'ruti, which says : “ (The Yogin should meditate on) the identity of the Microcosm with the Macrocosm, likewise of the Liṅga with the Sūtrātman, of the sleeping with the unmanifested states, and of the Kṣetra-jñā with the Paramātman.”

O Treasure-mine ! ever smiling, possessed of boundless qualities, proficient in holding the scales even, uninterrupted fountain of Wisdom, ever abiding in well-controlled minds, by no means bound to conventions, with feet glorified by all the Upaniṣad-s, void of risks and eternal, hallow this laudatory composition of even mine (Thy humble devotee).

This stanza is commented upon by Kāmes'vara-sūri, which indicates that it finds a place in his manuscript and has been recognized by him as part of the work. The poet characterizes the Devī as a Treasure-mine and gives us some specimens of the gems it contains, without forcing us to the necessity of delving deeply into it. Mark the alliteration.

O Mother of diction! composing this hymn (in praise) of Thee, in words originating from Thee, is very much like adoring the Sun by waving a light (before him), offering, the Moon, drops of water (flowing out) of a moonstone, and pleasing the Ocean by (pouring) water into it.

The poet here says that his attempt at composing this work is very much like "carrying coals to Newcastle", if one more simile may be used to explain his several similes. Kaivalyāśrama's gloss deals with all the 103 stanzas. He is however of opinion that stanza 88 is an interpolation.
